When approved by Alameda voters, I recall that this entailed the “reuse” of the property on McKay Avenue. It now appears that the property is going to be either significantly altered, or perhaps even demolished. This was not the intent as expressed in the ballot proposition, and would appear to invalidate any approvals previously given in that it does not protect the historical aspects of the property.

Can you please advise if detailed plans for any proposed changes have been submitted for approval?

Thank you,

Dan Westerlin

Dear Alameda Historical Advisory Board Members,

- I kindly ask that you please keep 620 Central Ave. on the Historical Advisory Board "S" Study List.
- The property has extraordinary historical significance;
- The U.S. Merchant Marines led exceptional efforts during WWII, supplying crucial supplies to our troops and Allies, risking their lives as the front liners, and assisted in what ultimately resulted in victory. The U.S. Merchant Marines also had the highest casualty rate during WWII.
- The U.S. Merchant Marine Training Officer School in Alameda was a crucial component to their heroic efforts, preparing leaders to strategize and organize crew. • The radio operator component of the school was also an important contributor to these efforts.
- The only other U.S. Merchant Marine Officer School at Fort Trumbull does not have the unique character and design as the original buildings in Alameda. The training school at Fort Trumbull repurposed older barracks dating back from the 1800s. The facility in Alameda was intentionally built at Neptune Beach for these WWII efforts. The training facility at Sheephead's Bay in NY was razed in 1960. This site in Alameda is one the last remaining remnants of the historical significance of the U.S. Merchant Marine efforts in WWII as well as the Korean War.
- The facility also had an important Radio Operator Training school--please see reference to 100 year old "Sparky" Billie Louella Adels.
- This property should be protected, and the buildings should be repurposed to include an interpretive center, community space, museum and other historical artifacts from WWII.
- This is an opportunity to preserve and honor the legacy of our veterans and educate the public on the history of the U.S. Merchant Marines, their dedicated service in WWII and how Alameda played a part in those important efforts.
- The Historical Advisory Board will be making a decision on Thursday, April 1, 2021, 7PM.
- Alameda voted in 2019 under Measure A to "reuse" federal surplus buildings--not demolish the historic property.

Measure A: "Shall an ordinance confirming the City Council's actions to permit reuse of vacant federal buildings on a 3.65-acre parcel on McKay Avenue and allow for the development of a wellness center for senior assisted living and supportive services for homeless individuals by changing the General Plan designation from "Federal Facilities" to "Office," removing the Government Combining District classification and maintaining the existing zoning district designation, be adopted?"

Dear team,

I am truly saddened to hear that you want to destroy these buildings instead of preserving them. These buildings are part of maritime history. Did you know that the World War II United States Merchant Marine will be receiving the Congressional Gold medal sometime this year as it was signed into law one year ago. Many of our fathers/grandfathers/uncles trained here and you are intent on destroying history for no reason. Your problems with homelessness is going to take a lot more work than simply tearing down a couple buildings. Maybe you should read a little history on the building.

Background of the United States Maritime Service

In 1936 Congress passed the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 which was known as the "Magna Carta" of the Merchant marine. This Act established the United States Maritime Commission, which was charged with the responsibility of seeing that American ships were "manned with a trained and efficient personnel." After considerable study the Maritime Commission proposed a program limited to men who had sea experience, and on June 23, 1938, Congress amended the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 to provide for the Maritime Commission's program. On that day the United States Maritime Service was born. The amendment directed the Commission to establish the U.S. Maritime Service as an organization with the same ranks and rates prescribed for the United States Coast Guard.

Alameda Historical Advisory Board Members
Sirs,

We wish to ask that you keep the WWII Merchant Marine buildings on the Historical Advisory "S" Study List. The buildings are a continuing reminder of Alameda's historical contribution to WWII efforts. And one of the few such left. Others such as the old brick machine works near the Ship Way on Marina Village Way were torn down. My understanding is that the buildings such as that on McKay Ave were the last or only ones purposely made for the purpose of training Merchant Mariners during that period. My understanding is that the various measures regarding these buildings were made with the specific understanding that they were to be re-used and not demolished. Under such circumstances demolition would seem to me to be a betrayal of the original proposal that we voted on.

Sincerely

Dear Mr. Levitt,

I hope you are doing well. It was recently brought to my attention last week at the Historical Advisory Board meeting that Alameda Point Collaborative intends to petition the Board for the property to be delisted from the Historical Advisory Board "S" Study List to move forward with plans to demolish all of the historical structures on the property.

The ballot measure leading up to the removal of the G-overlay and subsequent lease agreement between the applicant and the GSA/HUD indicated a clear intent for reuse of existing federal buildings. Should this go back to the voters now that the intent is to demolish all of the structures on the property? I kindly ask that you review the following links, the language in the ballot measures and arguments, as it appears that the public voted for reuse, and was not informed of the potential demolition of the existing buildings.

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Alameda Point Collaborative - Something isn't right

To all members of the Alameda Historical Advisory Board,

Regarding the property at 620 Central Ave. in Alameda, CA and upcoming April 1 AHAB meeting: The Alameda Point Collaborative worked to get a city Measure A passed in 2019 which in writing, marketing, and APC director comments called for the reuse of the existing buildings. Reuse was even clearly stated in the GSA/HUD application.

Now, APC is looking to create a circumstance where they can demolish the buildings. The prospect of demolishing the buildings is not what our city had put in front of us and is not what messaging during the campaign espoused. This change in direction, if allowed to happen, is a wrong against the people of Alameda and the decision AHAB is being asked to make.

These buildings can only be torn down once - then they are gone, forever. Seems appropriate that part of looking at this issue would be getting unfettered input from city residents. Thus, as a minimum, deny the current request to change the site's Study List designation. The buildings have significance in their own right. But, let APC come back. Suggest APC and their supporters get the backing of Alameda via a new measure if tearing down the buildings is meant to be. Let the voters have transparency and AHAB have wider and more clear input from where those most affected - the city's citizens - really stand.

Thank you,
Dave

Hello,

It has come to my attention that Mr. Biggs of APC is seeking to remove the historical site designation of the McKay site in order to demolish the existing buildings and build new, larger building(s).

A big part of the Measure A campaign was Mr. Biggs' promotion of the use of the existing buildings being more economically and environmentally conscience. It seems voters were tricked by a bait and switch. We are being told we are getting an even larger and more expensive center AFTER we voted to allow something different.

Is this legal? It certainly leaves a bad feeling of being deceived.

Ms. Kung:

I have looked into your inquiry and have been informed of the below information.

It is my understanding that Alameda City Measure A (2019) was a City measure seeking voter confirmation of the City Council's earlier legislative decision to amend the City's general plan and zoning designation to allow for private use of the property for the McKay Avenue Wellness Center Project. The measure does not, and indeed could not, limit a property owner's decision on whether to proceed with a specific project. The project applicant, which previously considered demolition of one building and adaptive reuse of the remaining buildings, is now considering whether to engage in some amount of additional demolition. In furtherance of that interest, the applicant has sought approval from the Historical Advisory Board (HAB) to delist the Alameda Federal Center property from the Historical Building Study List before undertaking any demolition. That application is pending before the HAB. As an alternative, the applicant has also submitted an application for a Certificate of Approval as required by the Historical Preservation Ordinance, which will be considered by the HAB at a future hearing date. Neither Measure A nor any other applicable local law compels the applicant to reuse (or demolish) the property at 620 Central Avenue.

Hello,

It has come to my attention that Mr. Biggs of APC is seeking to remove the historical site designation of the McKay site in order to demolish the existing buildings and build new, larger building(s).

A big part of the Measure A campaign was Mr. Biggs' promotion of the use of the existing buildings being more economically and environmentally conscience. It seems voters were tricked by a bait and switch. We are being told we are getting an even larger and more expensive center AFTER we voted to allow something different.

Is this legal? It certainly leaves a bad feeling of being deceived.

Dear Alameda Historical Advisory Board Members,

I ask that the HAB please keep the status of 620 Central Ave as is on the study list.

Although it may not be within the HAB's jurisdiction to address such questions, I would like to ask, at what point did it become clear that the applicant intended to demolish the buildings ? Because the information provided to voters at the special election clearly stated "the reuse of existing buildings".

I appreciate your attention,
Fey Adelstein

City of Alameda, Historical Advisory Board
Attn: Lynn Jones, Alvin Lau, Norman Sanchez, Thomas Saxby, Jenn Wit

March 22, 2021

Dear Board Members of the City of Alameda Historical Advisory Board:

I am writing to you to express opposition of any efforts to remove the historical designation of the remains of the WWII Merchant Marine training facility in Alameda.

You may ask why a Wisconsin resident would be interested in the fate of a slice of real estate more than half way across the country from his home. Fair enough question!

In WWII, Merchant Mariners came from all corners of the United States of America to train at this former maritime school. These mariners in turn carried their newfound skills across the seas to engage in a global war, delivering the vital supplies necessary to fuel the Allied war machine.

Today, the children, grandchildren, and other descendants of these WWII Merchant Mariners are likewise located all over the country. Their common bond is a mutual interest in preserving history.

While I generally support the need to provide shelter for the homeless and needy, I do not believe such social benefits should come at the expense of destroying history. Other non-historical designated areas exist and may serve such purposes.

1 in 26 U.S. Merchant Mariners who served in WWII were killed. That is NOT a typo. This in fact was the highest per capita casualty ratio of any service branch in the Second World War. Thousands more mariners were injured, hundreds of ships were sunk, and dozens of men (and even one woman) were captured and tortured as POW's. In fact, training facilities such as the former officer's school in Alameda were created to fill the manpower gap. For a while, we were losing men faster than training centers could qualify replacements!

Furthermore, such Merchant Mariners were promised (by none other than F.D.R.) benefits equivalent to the GI Bill. However, this promise died with our great leader, and our mariners would achieve Veterans' status in 1988, and only then after suing the U.S. government. By this time, our WWII Merchant Mariners were at or beyond retirement age, and could not capitalize on any meaningful benefits that arrived 43 years too late. As you can see, this delicate chapter in history regarding our WWII Merchant Mariners is one which must be preserved.

It should be understood that the war could simply not have been won without the Merchant Marine. Despite tremendous losses, the U.S. Merchant Marine ultimately prevailed thanks to intense shipbuilding programs and dedicated training centers, such as the former site in Alameda. In fact, the U.S. Merchant Marine collectively delivered an average of 8,500 tons of cargo to Allied forces, every hour of every day, during the last year of the war!

I have enclosed some additional information to help support my opinion. Also, I am printing out the names/signatures and comments from a Change.org petition which has collected over 600 signatures in under six days, from people who wish to see this former training site preserved.

Thank you for taking the time to review my letter and materials.

Sincerely,

Sheila M. Sovo started this petition to Alameda Historical Advisory Board

Help save and preserve the Alameda, CA historic WWII Merchant Marine training site!

PETITION OBJECTIVE: Please take action by signing this petition to explain to the Alameda Historical Advisory Board the historical significance of the U.S. Merchant Marine Training School so that it may remain on the Historical Advisory Board Study List with an "S" (State) designation:

Assistance is needed in supporting the preservation of a historic U.S. Merchant Marine Officer training school in Alameda, CA, located on a 3.5-acre parcel. This site was one of only two officer training schools in the nation that led the efforts in providing crucial support in WWII. The site in Alameda is unique and historically significant. A developer has recently petitioned the City of Alameda to remove the property from the Alameda Historical Advisory Board "S" Study List, in order to move forward with demolition of all the buildings on the property.

We realize that many of you had fathers or grandfathers who trained at this historic site. We are relying on YOU to speak up and help preserve history! In addition to signing this petition, please take time to email and/or write to the Alameda Historical Advisory Board:

-Alan Tai, Planning Board, Secretary to Historical Advisory Board: atai@alamedaca.gov

- City Manager: manager@alamedaca.gov

- Theresa Ritta, HHS program manager: theresa.ritta@psc.hhs.gov

Following are points of discussion of which to engage Board Members:

- The U.S. Merchant Marines led extraordinary efforts during WWII, supplying crucial supplies to our troops and Allies, risking their lives as the front liners, and assisted in what ultimately resulted in victory. The U.S. Merchant Marines also had the highest casualty rate per capita during WWII.
- The U.S. Merchant Marine Training Officer School in Alameda was a crucial component to their heroic efforts, preparing leaders to strategize and organize troops. The radio operator component of the school was also an important contributor to these efforts.
- The only other U.S. Merchant Marine Officer School at Fort Trumbull, CT does not have the unique character and design as the original buildings in Alameda. The training school at Fort Trumbull repurposed older barracks dating back from the 1800's. The facility in Alameda was intentionally built at Neptune Beach for these WWII efforts. The training facility at Sheepshead's Bay in NY was razed in 1960. This site in Alameda is one of the last remaining remnants of the historical significance of the U.S. Merchant Marine efforts in WWII as well as the Korean War.
- This property should be protected, and the buildings should be repurposed to include an interpretive center, community space, museum, and other historical artifacts from WWII.
- This is an opportunity to preserve and honor the legacy of our veterans and educate the public on the history of the U.S. Merchant Marines and dedicated service in WWII, and to show how Alameda played a part in those important efforts.
- The Historical Advisory Board will be next discussing this issue in May.

Following is the exact location of the property; please note that much of the original property and buildings are already gone:

-Alameda Federal Center Northern Parcel, located at: 620 Central Ave. Alameda, CA, 94501

-GSA Control No 9-G-CA-1604-AD; HUD #54201630019

-Assessor's Map: 21-004/26-2; 3.65 acres; 37°46'13.0"N 122°16'43.9"W

History of the property:

1942: A 100-acre site was established as a U.S. Merchant Marine Officer Training School in Alameda, CA that included 25 buildings.

1943-1957: The property served as a U.S. Merchant Marine Officer training school, Radio Operator school, and Korean War training facility. The property became surplus in 1957.

1961: Most of the acres were sold to the State of California. The G.S.A. retained 7.5 acres as the "Alameda Federal Center". The G.S.A. utilized the buildings for U.S.D.A. testing labs and other lab facilities. At this time, the G.S.A. demolished several buildings on the southern parcel.

1978: The City of Alameda established the Historical Advisory Board and listed 620 Central Avenue on the Study List with an "S" (State) designation.

2003: The G.S.A. sought information for inclusion of the federal property on the National Register of Historic Places. The determination resulted in ineligibility for the "N" (National) designation as an analysis determined that much integrity of the site had been lost. (This however, does not preclude the site from remaining on the "S" (State) designation on the local historic registry.) At this time 17 structures remained on the property.

2011: The G.S.A. consolidated use on the 3.65-acres of northern parcel, and placed the southern 4-acre parcel for sale.

2015: East Bay Regional Parks purchased the southern parcel of 3.9 acres for $2.18 million, and incorporated it into the adjacent parkland.

2016: The U.S.D.A. abandoned use of the property.

2018: The G.S.A. determined the property as "surplus" which made it available to homeless service providers under the McKinney Vento Act. Alameda Point Collective submitted an application with their intention to reuse and repurpose the existing buildings. A.P.C. then petitioned to enter into a lease agreement with the G.S.A. This lease expires 9/2021, unless the G.S.A. determines that A.P.C. satisfies the requirements and financial feasibility of their project to be deeded the property.

2019: The City of Alameda had a special election (Measures A and B) to remove the "G" (Government) overlay on the Central Ave/McKay Avenue property. Measure B was a competing measure for an "Open Space" designation. The election was close, and ultimately the "G" overlay was lifted and A.P.C. moved forward on their plans to propose a county-wide homeless facility. A lawsuit against A.P.C. was brought forward by a local citizens group. It challenged the validity of a lower-level environmental report instead of the higher level C.E.Q.A. mandate. This case was dismissed.

2020: A.P.C. presented one part of their project for approval to the Design Review Board, Planning Board, and then City Council. It stated repurposing of the U.S. Merchant Marine barracks. A second lawsuit was brought forward and is still pending. It challenges that A.P.C. neglected to address the Historical Advisory Board before proceeding to Design Review as the property is on the Historical Advisory Board Study List with an "S" designation.

2021: A.P.C. petitions the Historical Advisory Board to delist the property from the historical designation, and states an intent to demolish all of the remaining 11 structures on the property. City staff from the Planning Board seemingly supported this by characterizing the delisting as merely a "clean up" effort.

U.S. Maritime Service Officer Training School
Alameda, California (1943-1954)

Background of the United States Maritime Service

In 1936 Congress passed the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 which was known as the "Magna Carta" of the Merchant marine. This Act established the United States Maritime Commission, which was charged with the responsibility of seeing that American ships were "manned with a trained and efficient personnel." After considerable study the Maritime Commission proposed a program limited to men who had sea experience, and on June 23, 1938, Congress amended the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 to provide for the Maritime Commission's program. On that day the United States Maritime Service was born. The amendment directed the Commission to establish the U.S. Maritime Service as an organization with the same ranks and rates prescribed for the United States Coast Guard.

Three weeks after the authorization, the Commission the initial training program started with the acquisition of Hoffman Island in lower New York Bay. Once a quarantine station for immigrants, Hoffman Island served as a Coast Guard training station during World War I.

On September 7, 1938, the first group of trainees arrived. Soon afterward a second station was opened on Government Island, San Francisco Bay, located between Alameda and Oakland [Present day name is Coast Guard Island.]. By the end of the year 389 licensed officers and unlicensed men were in training at both stations. It was anticipated that when full facilities were available, 300 licensed and 3,900 unlicensed personnel would be trained annually. U.S. Coast Guard facilities and personnel administered the 90 day training program for men having at least 2 years' experience at sea. Fort Trumbull, Conn. was opened on January 1, 1939.

Temporary barracks and training center before the school was built was on the Mississippi River Boat, the Delta Queen. About 1400 men were stationed on it. Training classes took place in the salon.

The U.S. Maritime Service Officer School operated in Alameda from 1943 until its closing in 1954. The Training School was opened on January 29, 1943 and dedicated on July 10, 1943. It was set up to train officers for the U.S. Merchant Marine. By August of 1943 nine hundred officers had been trained, and before its first anniversary the base had sent 2,000 officers to sea either as third mates or third assistant engineers.

The minimum requirement of 18 months previous sea experience was later lowered to 14 months. After World War II it was required to have 36 months sea experience before sitting for a license examination. Around 2000 officers a year were trained.

U. S. Maritime Service Officer Training School Alameda, California

At the gateway to the Pacific, where our merchant fleet heads out for Alaska, Australia, the Marshalls and other island bases "down under," is located one of two schools in this country where Merchant Seamen can come off their ships and earn officers' papers. There are undoubtedly other schools that resemble this particular station in both physical appearance and the men themselves who are ambitious enough to tackle the tough course.

Welcome to Alameda

Significant, however, is that fact that here --- the U. S. Maritime Service Officers School in Alameda, Calif. --- is the only station on our western coast where a seaman can come ashore, sharpen up his technical knowledge in up-to-the-minute courses, and return to his ship with gold braid on his sleeves and an officer's license in his pocket.

But the training isn't as simple as all that. In fact, it's downright tough. The brevity of the training period, four months, and the amount of material that has to be covered, which is truly tremendous, is an indication of how hard the officer candidates have to work. Graduation from the station is a real achievement. Candidates not only lead a stiff life academically but in every other aspect as well. Discipline is strict and orders are carried out to the letter. Every thing runs like clockwork.

Saturday Review

Unlike most officer candidates, these men are "veterans" of this war. They've spent at least 14 months at sea which means most of them have been exposed to enemy attack. Many of them have seen direct action with either enemy submarines or planes. They've been all over the world, carrying supplies to the remote bases on Iceland, Alaska and the pinpoint spots in the Atlantic and Pacific; they've been in on island invasions and took part in the initial attack on North Africa; they were busy ducking shrapnel and firing at Messerschmitts when Sicily and Italy were invaded. Maybe they'll be back at sea when the long awaited second front is opened. All of the men are veterans in the war at sea and they all have one immediate --- and difficult --- goal to reach. That goal is acquiring their officer's papers.

Hero From Alameda

In recognition of the valorous service rendered his country through the rescue of a fellow seaman, William Morris Thomas Jr., 22-year-old assistant engineer from Alameda, Cal., has been depicted upon the current Collier's magazine cover. The illustration, executed by C. C. Beall, shows Thomas, holder of the Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal for his gallant deed, in the last stage of saving William Hutchinson of Portland, Oregon, from their doomed freighter, on the violent night of November 8, 1942. Although wounded severely during the incident, Thomas asked to be returned to active duty immediately upon his recovery. SF Chronicle, December 5, 1943.

Members of the "Torpedo Club." E.D. Ridgell, Baltimore, John Brennan, St. Louis, and E.J. Park, Seattle (l. to r.) autograph a model of a torpedo which sank their ships. They were among 350 students recently graduated and commissioned as Ensigns in the U.S. Maritime Service. Among the graduates are 90 young men who have been aboard ships that were torpedoed, bombed, machine-gunned or sunk in battle action. (Central Press) newspaper source and date unknown

The training program at Alameda is as modern as tomorrow's super liners and complete enough to give the candidate all the confidence he needs for his new position on hoard ship. Since many of the seamen may not have a scholar's background, a remedial program has been included to give them tips on saving time during study periods, how to approach difficult technical problems, how to bracket study periods, and how to avoid examination jitters.

Deck Cadets practicing semaphore signalling

A candidate does not only learn the functional duties of an officer aboard ship but he learns to act as an officer as well. He may lead new men in their first week of indoctrination and orientation, actually helping to give the classification tests and explaining the history, tradition and practices at the school. He may become a section leader and lead his men during reviews. And at all times he is taught to recognize the fact that the word "candidate" will soon be stricken from his title and only the word "officer" will remain. The men are schooled thoroughly and carefully. They are impressed with the fact that a ship's crew needs intelligent leadership, not misdirected authority, in peace time as well as in war.

Training Program at Alameda

The training program itself is no hap-hazard affair. All courses are prepared by instructors --- Merchant Marine officers --- who know the needs of students because they've spent a good part of their life on salt water. Course reference work is compiled from practical experience, text books and license examinations and is constantly revised to keep material up-to-date. Audio-sensory aids, training films, charts and records are used profusely. Courses are integrated and coordinated as much as possible; for example, a mathematics class at 0900 might deal with the exact problem to be discussed in steam theory at 1300.

Practical and theoretical aspects of training are also correlated. The engineering building has cutaways and operating boiler units, various engine room pumps, miniature reciprocating engines, lathes, milling machines and shapers, all within a few steps of classroom desk-chairs.

Deck students gain practical knowledge on a bridge fitted out with wheel, magnetic compass, gyro repeater, inter-communication telephone, engine room telegraph, chart tables, chronometers and other navigation instruments. A standard compass and pelorus are on the flying bridge. There are booms, a mast and a cargo hatch. A barrage balloon flies from time ship and blinkers and searchlights are used. A recently installed Mark I machine gun trainer simulates actual conditions of shooting at enemy aircraft. It is housed in a special building where candidates, wearing polarized goggles, can fire at images of enemy planes on a third dimensional screen.

Lathe instruction for engine cadet

A list of subjects as long as your arm greets every officer candidate. If he's able to recover from the initial shock, a Deck student will learn rules of the nautical road, general rules seamanship, cargo handling and convoy procedure, navigation (including piloting, sailing and celestial navigation, star identification, etc.), mathematics, ship construction, safety requirements, stowage and mensuration, semaphore and gyro-compass, first aid, small boat handling, and water safety.

The Engineer's routine isn't any easier. In basic physics he learns about stresses and strains, gas and steam laws, and kindred subjects. He goes over the construction, operation and maintenance of boilers; he learns about Diesels and reciprocating engines and turbines. He will also have turned to in the machine shop and studied electricity, mechanical drawing and refrigeration.

Not easy, eh? Well every candidate knows it is no "fluff-off" routine or he would have been saved the trouble of his initial enrollment. The wartime need for competent trained officers on merchant ships made it imperative to consolidate and intensify training. And at the end of the four month course, these men are qualified to take their positions as Third Mates or Third Assistant Engineers onboard ship.

Despite the stiff training program, which not only puts a definite tax on the brain but occupies most of the candidate's time, there is a chance for recreation. That is, if his grades are in order and he's indulged in no horseplay. A candidate may join the basketball or baseball team, play on his section's softball club, or participate in other sports. He may just want to browse through the fiction library or he may even take a postman's holiday and go sailing.

Kay Kyser, Band To Appear at Maritime School

Kay Kayser and his Kollege of Musical Knowledge will appear at the U.S. Maritime Officers' School, Neptune Beach, on Wednesday. Kyser's troupe will give two shows --- one in the afternoon for station personnel only and another in the evening which will be broadcast nationally. It is the third nationally known band to appear at the school. The others were Tommy Dorsey and Horace Heidt [and his Musical Knights]. Alameda Times-Star, June 29, 1943.

Movies are shown in the evenings, twice weekly, and a chance for a chinfest with fellow students is afforded in the coffee bar attached to the canteen.

Merchant Marine Men Will Parade

Two hundred and fifty officer candidates from the U. S. Maritime Officers' School in Alameda, and 50 unlicensed men from the Maritime Service Graduate Station will parade up Market Street to the Fox Theater at 7:30 this evening, it was announced. The parade will be held in celebration of the opening of "Action in the North Atlantic," a motion picture featuring the merchant seamen. S.F. Chronicle, June 22, 1943.

Hello MR. BENNY!

Jack Benny, who also plays a violin, will be the guest star in our Shenandoah Show-Hall stage presentation 21 May, at 1600. The droll comedian will be in the bay region for appearances on his regular Sunday evening radio show and at hospitals in this area.

With him from his radio program will be Don Wilson, large and jovial master of ceremonies, and Larry Stevens, singer. The personal appearance of Jack Benny will be only part of our show. Stars appearing at San Francisco theatres and night clubs will also perform.

Captain Edward Macauley, USN (Ret.) Deputy Administrator of the War Shipping Administration, and Commodore Telfair Knight, Commandant of the U.S. Maritime Service and Assistant Administrator for Training, will be guests of honor. Members of this station only will be admitted. [From the Neptune newsletter]

Neptune Beach

The Alameda station is situated on the site of a former beach resort and amusement park but not even a suggestion of the pitchmen, the roller coasters, the picnic grounds and sun bathers remains. Nothing is the same --- that is, except for one thing, the Californians say. The weather.

Outdoor training is possible the entire year, except in cases of "unusual dew." Twenty buildings have arisen from the former ghost town that was Neptune Beach. When the school was moved from Government Island not a day of training was lost in the shift. Since the change was made more than 2000 officers have been graduated from the station.

The mascot of the Base was Blackie, the dog, who lived nearby. His owner decided to let him live on the base after he crashed through a window to answer a fire alarm. Blackie became a fixture on the fire engine when it went out for calls. A commemorative plaque to Blackie is still located near the monument.

Alameda Station Superintendent Commander Malcolm E. Crossman

A seafaring man all of his life. Commander Crossman earned his Master's license at the age of 26. He graduated from the training ship Nantucket in 1925 and was named executive officer of California schoolship in 1931. Later he worked ashore supervising the operation, loading, discharging and claim prevention of the fleet of a large shipping company. Commander Crossman was called to active duty by the Navy in 1940 and assigned as District Supervisor for Merchant Marine Cadet Training under the Maritime Commission. In August 1942, he became Superintendent of the Maritime Service Training Station at Hueneme and then Catalina. In November 1942, he was transferred to a similar post at Hoffman Island. He came to Alameda as superintendent on January 29, 1944.

Superintendent of the Alameda station is Commander Malcolm E. Crossman, USNR.

Officers' Oath. Graduating students at the Alameda Officers School repeat the oath of a U.S. Maritime Service officer

At Alameda, as at other maritime training stations, young and ambitious Americans are not only building new careers but are learning to appreciate the opportunities and problems associated with our Merchant Marine. It is with leaders such as these that the future of our merchant fleet will depend when the war is over.

YOU DON'T KNOW ME!

An Appeal to Those Leaders and Legislators Who Labor on Behalf of This Great Nation From Veterans of World War II

Hell No.

Hear our plea and our story for the support of legislation "Honoring WWII Merchant Mariners Act of 2017" – House bill HR.154. We know that you are besieged with many requests for support of other causes. We know you have many issues, which may be seen as a priority. We ask you to give us who remain what was promised or similar. If there are public hearings, we can provide brief testimony for our cause. We will provide information, which will shed new light on our history and contribution during World War II. Moreover, we ask that you favor this aging group of Veterans and let them know that they are not forgotten.

We Won't Go Away!

OUR STORY – By Dave Yoho

We are like grains of sand on the vast seashore of life. We are part of a rapidly eroding station of life. We are old and Veterans of World War II.

There were 16 million U.S. service men in uniform – from a population of about 130 million. Our special group represented 250 thousand of those Veterans. Now less than 2500 of us remain.

We were called to service by a great president (Franklin D. Roosevelt), and legislation was enacted for the creation of this special group.

We were issued and required to wear uniforms, trained and marched in a military manner; we had to go through guards to get in to our base and we could not leave without special documentation. We were taught wartime techniques, the use of anti-aircraft guns, and each day our regimentation was supervised in a military manner with penalties for the violation of good conduct rules or military dress.

We were all volunteers; we were present on all five continents on which that war was fought. We were wherever allied fighting forces were called upon, at every invasion, on every sea and ocean.

The coast guard administered our records and training and the U.S. Navy controlled the scheduling, departure and destination for those ships on which we served. In the 7 months, which followed our entry into war, many of us served on ships, which sailed through hostile waters off our eastern seaboard.

From Nova Scotia down to Florida and further, these ships traveled without special armament, guns or ammunition and without convoy – following the routes and going to ports mandated by the U.S. Navy.

In those first 7 months of World War II, 300 ships were sunk and 3000 seaman died right off that eastern coastline of the United States.

In a distant place called Murmansk Russia, American and allied ships were called upon to deliver the goods of war. These ships laden with tanks, trucks, planes, ammunition, fuel, clothing and food, sailed through ice and seas so cold that those who were forced to abandon ship survived for less than 10 minutes before going to their watery grave. No ships were permitted to stop or slow down to rescue survivors. On one occasion, supporting combat ships were withdrawn from Merchant ships and their crews were left to face German ships and submarines, which rapidly diminished their numbers.

Recruiting poster
Circa 1943/1944

The beautiful World War II Memorial in Washington, DC pays tribute to Murmansk as a critical battlefield of that war. Yet, this is but of one of those bloody, life-destroying encounters in which we participated and for which we paid dearly with our lives.

Dave Yoho – (arrow) Age 16 at basic training U.S. Maritime Service, Sheepshead Bay 1944

The majority of us were very young when we enlisted; many under the age of 18; some were 16 or 17 years of age. We were trained in a military environment and put on ships at graduation.

When the war ended, we had the highest casualty rate of any of the services. Even then, President Harry Truman implored us to remain in service to bring home the troops from five continents, to transport and bring supplies, machinery and other equipment of peace to the needy world. At war's ending, we were eager to return to our homes and families, yet most of us responded to the call to continually serve our country.

On June 22nd, 1944, President Roosevelt signed into law "The G.I. Bill", which was presented to him by both houses. On that date, and for the record, he stated:

"I trust Congress will soon provide similar opportunities to the members of the Merchant Marines who have risked their lives time and time again during the war for the welfare of their country."

Unfortunately, President Roosevelt died in April of 1945 and his desires and intent were not fulfilled. It took 43 years (till 1988) of struggle through our own medical bills, getting further education or buying a home. These rights were finally given to us in 1988 when we were in our mid 60s; some over 70.

We served as we were called upon to do. We were volunteers who pledged our lives and service for this great country. We gave up our youth and our maturing years. Three and a half percent of us died in that service. Many thousands more carried their injuries both physical and psychological through their post war lives. Ever proud of our country, we stand as able when our national anthem is played and when our flag is presented.

At functions where the military services are honored we applaud as each service hears their music played. Ours (heave ho) is seldom, if ever rendered.

We support our country, yet in our pain and remembrance, we hear that our earnings far exceeded those in the other services, which was not true. A Boatswain mate in the Navy made approximately $2250 per year and received tax exemption of $1500. A Merchant Marine equivalent (an able seaman) was paid approximately $2600 per year all subject to income tax. If perchance, his ship was sunk or he became a prisoner of war, his pay stopped while the Army or Navy veteran received full pay, medical attention for dependents and medical benefits post war. We received $1.00 per day if taken prisoner and no access to the benefits afforded to Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marines.

We suffered post war injuries to both mind and body including but not limited to malaria, ulcers, H-Pylori and post-traumatic stress. For 43 years (til 1988) we were denied those health care benefits, which were made available to all other Veterans.

We waited patiently as others affected by World War II were acknowledged and were given both kudos and compensation. We mourn our brother Mariners who have "passed" and their families who cry out for recognition and ask you to support HR.154.

"Do you, – can you, – will you – ever comprehend that we gave up our youth? For many of us, there were no high school graduations, dances, proms, sporting events, meetings at the malt shop... These are things we, consciously or unconsciously, agreed to abandon when we took an oath and did what we were asked to do."

--Dave Yoho (from speech at National Convention)

THE AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINES IN WORLD WAR II

Please review these and support HR.154

Facts & Fables

Fact: Our war ended 72 years ago. Our life began anew. We licked our wounds. We bound our emotional hurts and moved our lives forward. Today, in our twilight years, we experience the continuing loss of our comrades, the dimming of our senses and the discomfort that comes from disappointment. We've read and heard the rumors and the misinformation. Only we, or those who faced World War II in like circumstances, can cause reflection on these implications. So, we look to you and pray that you will support our plea. Give us hearing and an opportunity to dispel misinformation. Let your actions speak to our plea. Let us be remembered for what we did and how we fulfilled our oath.

Fable: The Merchant Marine was a harbor for those trying to avoid the draft.

Fact: The original wartime draft was for those 18 years or older. Some volunteers might have opted out of the U.S. Army. That was also probably true of some Navy and Coast Guard volunteers. The highest percentage of Maritime service recruits were under 19 years of age. Some were unable to meet the physical requirements of the other services. Some over the age of 35 were draft exempt and still volunteered to do their part. African-American recruits may have opted in because we were the only totally integrated service.

Fable: The Merchant Marine received inordinate benefits when in combat zone.

Fact: There were bonuses if the ship were bombed or sunk and limited bonuses if your ship was in a combat zone. In my earlier example, the coastline of the eastern United States and a vast part of the Pacific Ocean were not considered combat zones (no bonus).

Fable: The Merchant Mariner was well rewarded for all his risk.

Fact: If the ship was sunk, disabled or if a mariner was taken as a prisoner of war (approximately 800 were) their pay stopped and no benefits were extended prior to or during captivity.

Fable: Once in the Merchant Marine, you could no longer be drafted.

Fact: If after a hazardous voyage or otherwise, you waited for another ship for more than 30 days, you could be drafted.

Fable: An injured Merchant Mariner had the right to sue and require the owners of the ship to compensate for medical bills and loss of income.

Fact: In many cases, the ships were owned by the U.S. government. One example would be W.E.T. (War Emergency Tankers) built by the government, sometimes leased but always regulated in terms of usage by the U.S. Navy. The concept of suing for justifiable injuries, lingering diseases or loss of compensation is complicated and largely unmanageable (incongruous).

Fable: Granting Merchant Mariners access to the GI Bill (in 1988) compensated them for any inequities they might have experienced.

Fact: Forty-three years after the war ended the average Merchant Mariner was over 60, sometimes 70 years of age. Any need for a mortgage or college education had long since passed. Merchant Mariners were, and still are in many cases, denied burial in military cemeteries. In many cases, the American Legion and the VFW do not permit membership.

Hello, it has come to my attention that as part of the Wellness Center project, the HAB will need to delist the site where the new Wellness Center at Crab Cove is planned. I am an Alameda resident and I urge the HAB to delist the site as necessary for the project needs. I voted for the wellness center, as did a majority of Alamedans. The services are urgently needed so please delist the building. Thank you.

Dear Members of the Alameda Historical Advisory Board:

I am writing to ask that you keep 620 Central Ave. on the Historical Advisory Board "S" Study List. This property has significant historical importance.

The U.S. Merchant Marines led exceptional efforts during WWII, supplying crucial supplies to our troops and Allies, risking their lives on the front lines, and assisting in what ultimately resulted in victory. The U.S. Merchant Marines also had an extraordinarily high casualty rate during WWII.

The U.S. Merchant Marine Training Officer School in Alameda was a crucial part of these heroic efforts, as was the radio operator component of the school. The only other Merchant Marine Training Officer School at Ft. Trumbull does not have the character and design of the buildings in Alameda. The training school at Ft. Trumbull re-purposed older barracks dating from the 1800s. By contrast, the facility in Alameda was built at Neptune Beach specifically for these WWII efforts. The training facility at Sheepshead Bay in New York was razed in 1960. This site in Alameda is one of the last remnants of the history of the U.S. Merchant Marines in WWII, as well as the Korean War.

This property should be protected, and the buildings should be modified to include an interpretive center, community space, and museum to showcase historical artifacts from WWII. This is an opportunity to preserve and honor the legacy of our veterans, and to educate the public on the history of the U.S. Merchant Marines, and their dedicated service in WWII, as well as the ways in which Alameda played a part in those important efforts.

The citizens of Alameda voted in 2019 under Measure A to "reuse" federal surplus buildings -- not to demolish historical properties.

I urge you to keep this property on the Board's "S" Study List. Thank you.

Very truly yours,

Alexandra Petrich

Dear team,

I am truly saddened to hear that you want to destroy these buildings instead of preserving them. These buildings are part of maritime history. Did you know that the World War II United States Merchant Marine will be receiving the Congressional Gold medal sometime this year as it was signed into law one year ago. Many of our fathers/grandfathers/uncles trained here and you are intent on destroying history for no reason. Your problems with homelessness is going to take a lot more work than simply tearing down a couple buildings. Maybe you should read a little history on the building.

Background of the United States Maritime Service

In 1936 Congress passed the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 which was known as the "Magna Carta" of the Merchant marine. This Act established the United States Maritime Commission, which was charged with the responsibility of seeing that American ships were "manned with a trained and efficient personnel." After considerable study the Maritime Commission proposed a program limited to men who had sea experience, and on June 23, 1938, Congress amended the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 to provide for the Maritime Commission's program. On that day the United States Maritime Service was born. The amendment directed the Commission to establish the U.S. Maritime Service as an organization with the same ranks and rates prescribed for the United States Coast Guard.

Hello Mr Tai, Mr Dong and Mr Levitt,

Thank you for your response. According to the legal definition of what is allowable per the zoning requirements, in order to qualify as a medically related professional business, "Nursing and convalescent homes" and "Rest Homes" must provide licensed nursing facilities. APC has submitted documents stating their facility would NOT be a licensed skilled nursing facility. Instead, they have stated an intent to provide "Permanent Supportive Housing" which is not permitted under A-P zoning. Please review and advise.

According to the California Advocates for Nursing Home Reform:

"In addition to being licensed, nursing homes that choose to participate in the Medicare and Medi-Cal programs must be certified by the federal government in order to qualify for payments from these programs. Federally certified facilities must meet federal standards as well as the California requirements."

Furthermore, if the intent of the proposal by APC is to house the most "medically complex and psychiatric patients" as stated in their application as well as "hospice" patients as they have publicly stated on numerous occasions, this assumes the residents would need licensed/skilled nursing care to adequately address their needs.

http://www.canhr.org/factsheets/nh_fs/html/fs_WhatisaNH.htm

"All nursing homes in California must be licensed by the California Department of Public Health (DPH) and meet California nursing home standards."

Could you also provide clarity into why the ballot measure specifically included language stating "reuse"? It is imperative that ballot measures be written in plain language so that citizens understand what they are voting for. It is also a civil right: <https://www.plainlanguage.gov/law/>

<https://www.govinfo.gov/app/details/PLAW-111publ274>

In this case, the ballot measure and supporting arguments state "reuse of federal buildings". Hence, you state, "Neither Measure A nor any other applicable local law compels the applicant to reuse (or demolish) the property, and the measure did not, and indeed could not, limit a property owner's decision on whether to proceed with a specific project," then the language set forth in the ballot measure and arguments was extremely misleading. I respectfully request a full review of the application, current zoning and ask that the City revisit the ballot measure, clarifying the language and offering the citizens an opportunity to vote again.

Thank you for your attention to this important matter.

Sincerely,
Carmen

Dear Carmen,

In response to your question, Measure A sought voter confirmation of the City Council's legislative actions to amend the land use designations for the property. The current land use designations (General Plan Office designation and Administrative-Professional Zoning designation) allow for a broad range of uses, including senior assisted living and supportive services for homeless individuals as proposed by APC. Neither Measure A nor any other applicable local law compels the applicant to reuse (or demolish) the property, and the measure did not, and indeed could not, limit a property owner's decision on whether to proceed with a specific project.

The property is owned by the United States of America (the federal government). In September 2018, the federal government entered into a lease with Alameda Point Collaborative for homeless assistance purposes. The lease is for three years from September 2018 and renewable with mutual consent.

Dear Sirs,

The language in the ballot measures explicitly states “reuse” of the existing federal buildings. If this was not going to be the case, why was it written this way? Voters expected “reuse” and not demolition.

Could you please confirm who is the current owner of the referenced property in the ballot measure? From my understanding, the property is currently owned by the government under the purview of HHS and APC holds a 3-year lease that expires 9/21. Is this correct?

Thank you.

Alameda City Measure A (2019) was a City measure seeking voter confirmation of the City Council’s earlier legislative decision to amend the City’s general plan and zoning designation to allow for private use of the property for the McKay Avenue Wellness Center Project. The measure does not, and indeed could not, limit a property owner's decision on whether to proceed with a specific project. The project applicant, which previously considered demolition of one building and adaptive reuse of the remaining buildings, is now considering whether to engage in some amount of additional demolition. In furtherance of that interest, the applicant has sought approval from the Historical Advisory Board (HAB) to delist the Alameda Federal Center property from the Historical Building Study List before undertaking any demolition. That application is pending before the HAB. As an alternative, the applicant has also submitted an application for a Certificate of Approval as required by the Historical Preservation Ordinance, which will be considered by the HAB at a future hearing date. Neither Measure A nor any other applicable local law compels the applicant to reuse (or demolish) the property at 620 Central Avenue.

Dear Mr. Levitt,

I hope you are doing well. It was recently brought to my attention last week at the Historical Advisory Board meeting that Alameda Point Collaborative intends to petition the Board for the property to be delisted from the Historical Advisory Board "S" Study List to move forward with plans to demolish all of the historical structures on the property.

The ballot measure leading up to the removal of the G-overlay and subsequent lease agreement between the applicant and the GSA/HUD indicated a clear intent for reuse of existing federal buildings. Should this go back to the voters now that the intent is to demolish all of the structures on the property? I kindly ask that you review the following links, the language in the ballot measures and arguments, as it appears that the public voted for reuse, and was not informed of the potential demolition of the existing buildings.

References:

Measure A: *"Shall an ordinance confirming the City Council's actions to permit reuse of vacant federal buildings on a 3.65-acre parcel on McKay Avenue and allow for the development of a wellness center for senior assisted living and supportive services for homeless individuals by changing the General Plan designation from "Federal Facilities" to "Office," removing the Government Combining District classification and maintaining the existing zoning district designation, be adopted?" Ballot arguments:

Furthermore, Alameda Point Collaborative stated in the application to GSA/HUD the intent to reuse existing buildings.

"(C) Supply a detailed description of how acquisition of the property will meet the proposed program's specific needs. This must include:

(1) Any anticipated improvements to the property (e.g. renovations or construction)

Dear Mr Levitt,

Thank you for your reply. I received the same exact message from Mr Tai yesterday, so it's unclear to me who was the author of this note.

I understand you were not the City Manager at the time the ballot measure was created. However, the language specifically references "reuse of vacant federal buildings" and the ballot arguments further state, "These buildings and their location...".

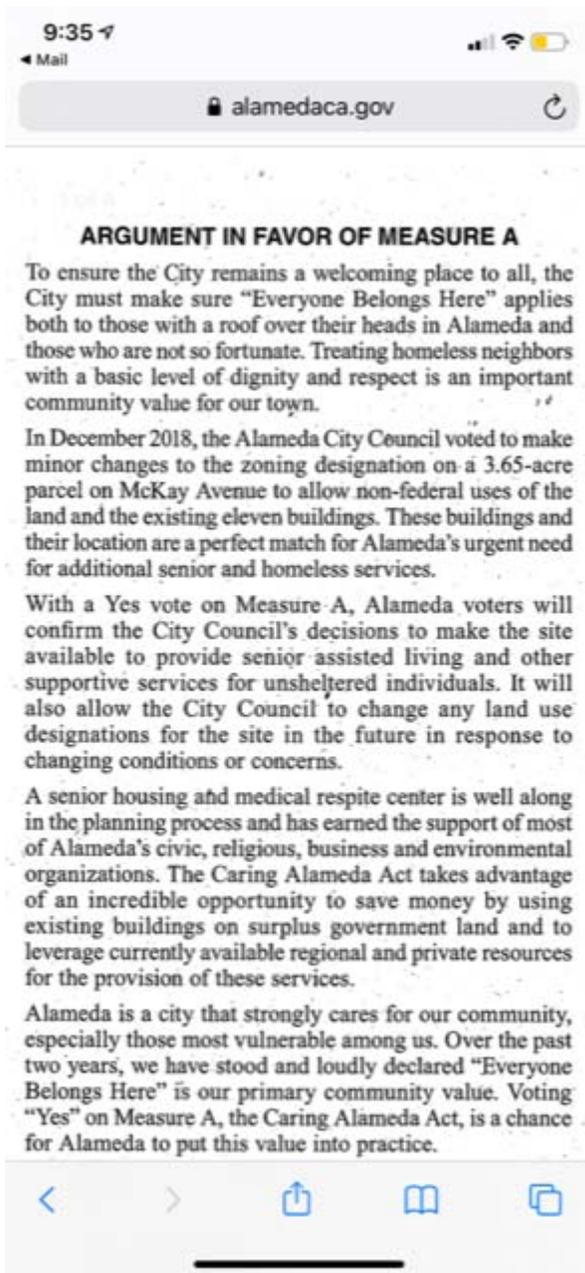

<https://www.alamedaca.gov/files/assets/public/departments/alameda/city-manager/alameda-measure-a.pdf>

It is my understanding that State law requires that ballot measures are to be written in "plain language" so that the voter understands what the measure is asking to do. In this case, the language specifies "reuse" and it is reiterated in the ballot argument. Furthermore, the applicant for the project proposal held numerous open houses at the federal buildings on McKay stating reuse of those facilities—specifically the military barracks. Voters expected reuse, not demolition.

I kindly suggest this ballot measure be revisited by the voters if the new intent is to demolish the historic military structures. I also ask that as City Manager you please contact HUD, HHS and GSA representatives to understand how the federal property would qualify under the McKinney Vento Act if the buildings were razed. Would that be grounds for disqualifying an applicant? From my understanding, the intent of the McKinney Vento Act is to repurpose suitable and available structures for homeless services, not demolish them entirely.

Would it be possible to make an appointment with you? Are you available sometime at the end of next week?

Thank you.
I appreciate your attention to this matter.

Carmen

I walk by that site on a near daily basis and it is a shame to see that it is not put to use. From my reading of your agenda record, there does not appear to be anything of historic or architectural significance that should be preserved there.

Although I am a new resident of Alameda as of a year ago, I understand that a plan for the site was approved by the voters some time ago. Dear City Manager Levitt:

I write to advise you, and put the City on notice of, important issues regarding the lease by Alameda Point Collaborative of the federal property located at 620 Central Avenue and the proposed development (<http://caringalameda.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/03/Full-application.pdf>). The City is legally obligated to enforce its rules, regulations and ballot measures. Please ensure that City staff does not facilitate any such demolition or delisting and actively protects the application of the existing zoning as identified below.

I expect that you will take all steps to avoid any passive or intentional malfeasance. I urge and appreciate your diligent efforts in this regard.

As I expect that the City is committed to doing the right thing in a transparent manner, I request notice of all upcoming hearings and pending decisions in enough time so that meaningful prior input can be provided. I also request notification of all actions pertaining to this property. I appreciate this and thank you in advance.

Please review the following inconsistencies:

1. Alameda Point Collaborative clearly stated in the application to GSA/HUD the intent to reuse existing buildings.

"(C) Supply a detailed description of how acquisition of the property will meet the proposed program's specific needs. This must include:

(1) Any anticipated improvements to the property (e.g. renovations or construction)

The Collaborating Partners are proposing the renovation and reuse of Buildings 1, 2A and 2D comprising a total of 59,167 square feet. These three buildings, which have both lower asbestos remediation costs and larger floor plates, will be retained for adaptive reuse."

At a recent Historical Advisory Board meeting, APC Director Doug Biggs has stated an intent to demolish all the buildings on the property:

Also, a recent ballot measure narrowly passed stating "reuse of vacant federal buildings":

Measure A: "Shall an ordinance confirming the City Council's actions to permit reuse of vacant federal buildings on a 3.65-acre parcel on McKay Avenue and allow for the development of a wellness center for senior assisted living and supportive services for homeless individuals by changing the General Plan designation from "Federal Facilities" to "Office," removing the Government Combining District classification and maintaining the existing zoning district designation, be adopted?" 2. The Applicant was aware that the property was listed on the Historical Advisory Board "S" Study List, and yet made no mention of this on the application. Furthermore, per municipal code, Alameda Municipal Code 13-21-4 (b), any proposed project listed on the Historical Advisory Board Study List must be first reviewed by that Board before proceeding to Design Review.

3. The Applicant failed to submit accurate information:

"CURRENT CONDITION OF PROPERTY (See P. 112/136)

1. If there are any structures on the property:

a. List the year in which they were built. 1942

b. If the structure is over fifty (50) years old:

i. Is the structure on the National Register of Historic Places? No.

ii. Contact the State Historic Preservation Officer (SHPO) to determine if the proposed use will adversely impact a historic property. Document and provide a copy of any response from the SHPO."

East Bay Regional Park obtained a no adverse impact from SHPO in order to demolish identical property on the southern part of the site in order to expand park area. We have requested but not yet received a copy of the clearance from SHPO."

Note that not only were there no records submitted from the SHPO, the property is not identical as stated in the application. Furthermore, per the California Register of Historical Resources (Title 14, Chapter 11.5; Section 4853 (3);

"If the results of the survey are five or more years old at the time of nomination, the documentation for a resource or resources, must be updated prior to nomination to ensure the accuracy of the information. The statute creating the California Register requires surveys over five (5) years old to be updated."

Instead, the Applicant ignored this, and sought approval through Design Review. This has led the Applicant to be involved in a pending lawsuit for not adhering to this process which also includes a CEQA mandate.

4. The property is zoned Administrative-Professional which does not allow for "Permanent Supportive Housing" as stated in efforts to secure funding.

"The property is improved with 11 buildings constructed in 1942 as WWII-era training facilities for officers in the U.S. Maritime Service, with a total of 11 buildings comprising 79,880 square feet with 93 parking spaces. The property is zoned APG- Administrative Professional Government, allowing general office development with a government use. The most recent property use was as a laboratory for testing meat and dairy products by the U.S. Department of Agriculture." (G-overlay was removed in Ballot Measure A).

Only "nursing or convalescent home" or "rest home" appears in the language for acceptable use under A-P. The State requires such a facility to be licensed under the California Department of Public Health for providing licensed/skilled nursing. The Applicant has stated it will only seek licensing under the California Department of Social Services, as their intent is to move forward with "Permanent Supportive Housing" and disregard State regulations. The State law is very clear in that convalescent patients who have open wounds, are unable to take their own medication etc. must be cared for under the regulations of the California Department of Public Health. The Applicant has repeatedly stated efforts to provide medical care to a resident population with complex medical and mental issues. Proposing an "unlicensed" facility is a serious concern.
A-P Zoning language:

Skilled Nursing Facilities Requirements:

<https://www.calhospital.org/cdph-licensing-enforcement>

Based on the totality of the misrepresented and misleading information to the public, as well as the now recent intent to demolish the historical structures on the property, I kindly urge you to direct staff to enforce its rules, regulations and ballot measure as explained above.

Sincerely,

Dan Tuazon

Dear Alameda Historical Advisory Board Members,

- I kindly ask that you please keep 620 Central Ave. on the Historical Advisory Board "S" Study List.
- The property has extraordinary historical significance;
- The U.S. Merchant Marines led exceptional efforts during WWII, supplying crucial supplies to our troops and Allies, risking their lives as the front liners, and assisted in what ultimately resulted in victory. The U.S. Merchant Marines also had the highest casualty rate during WWII.
- The U.S. Merchant Marine Training Officer School in Alameda was a crucial component to their heroic efforts, preparing leaders to strategize and organize crew. •The radio operator component of the school was also an important contributor to these efforts.
- The only other U.S. Merchant Marine Officer School at Fort Trumbull does not have the unique character and design as the original buildings in Alameda. The training school at Fort Trumbull repurposed older barracks dating back from the 1800s. The facility in Alameda was intentionally built at Neptune Beach for these WWII efforts. The training facility at Sheephead's Bay in NY was razed in 1960. This site in Alameda is one the last remaining remnants of the historical significance of the U.S. Merchant Marine efforts in WWII as well as the Korean War.
- The facility also had an important Radio Operator Training school--please see reference to 100 year old "Sparky" Billie Louella Adels.
- This property should be protected, and the buildings should be repurposed to include an interpretive center, community space, museum and other historical artifacts from WWII.
- This is an opportunity to preserve and honor the legacy of our veterans and educate the public on the history of the U.S. Merchant Marines, their dedicated service in WWII and how Alameda played a part in those important efforts.
- The Historical Advisory Board will be making a decision on Thursday, April 1, 2021, 7PM.
- Alameda voted in 2019 under Measure A to "reuse" federal surplus buildings--not demolish the historic property.

Measure A: *"Shall an ordinance confirming the City Council's actions to permit reuse of vacant federal buildings on a 3.65-acre parcel on McKay Avenue and allow for the development of a wellness center for senior assisted living and supportive services for homeless individuals by changing the General Plan designation from "Federal Facilities" to "Office," removing the Government Combining District classification and maintaining the existing zoning district designation, be adopted?" Historic Advisory Board
City of Alameda, CA

Dear Board Members,

The USS Hornet Sea, Air & Space Museum strongly objects to the delisting of the Merchant Marine Officer Training Facility at Crab Cove as a historic site and to the proposed complete demolition of the remaining buildings. At least a portion of this site must be preserved as a museum to document this important part of Alameda’s participation in the Nation’s war effort in the 1940s through the 1950s.

The Merchant Marines provided the vital links to keep supplies moving during the darkest days of WWII. The men who came here for officer training had already spent over a year at sea where they were exposed to enemy attack by submarines and aircraft. Upon completion, these newly minted officers returned to their ships to bravely apply their new skills to help warships like USS Hornet win the war.

Physically, the site may appear as a group of old buildings having outlived their usefulness, waiting for demolition to make way for something new. However, the treasure is in how these structures can continue on in a new life to serve as a community space to tell the story of the Merchant Marines and Alameda’s role in such a crucial part of America’s war efforts. No new construction can ever capture the memories, lessons, and spirit of the Training Facility and those who passed through it as well as the original structures.

As an institution dedicated to historical preservation, we are aware of the critical loss of sites like the Merchant Marine Officer Training Facility. Alameda’s rich maritime history, particularly regarding the WWII era, is priceless as well as underrepresented. Please continue to protect this as a historical site with an intent of eventually establishing it as a museum preserving the history of the Merchant Marines’ participation in the war.

Sincerely,

Capt. Mark Epperson USNR (ret.)

Alameda played a significant role in the naval services of both WWII and the Korean War. The Maritime Officers School is a building that played a significant part in both of these wars and is a monument to these historic efforts. Without these buildings our understanding of the events and actions that took place become vague and easily misinformed. SAVETHE BUILDINGS AND THEIR SITES.

Dear Historical Advisory Board Members,

As some may say, I am an old timer in Alameda. I have lived in Alameda for over 60 years and I remember as a child how the military was a prominent part of Alameda. I grew up in Navy housing and went to schools in the West End of Alameda. I am requesting the Historical Advisory Board to please keep 620 Central Ave. on the Historical Advisory Board Study list in order to obtain more information on the historical significance of these buildings.

Alameda's military history should be preserved throughout the island not just at the base. The US Merchant Marines were important part of American history and unfortunately other cities have demolished their US Merchant Marines historic buildings and it would be unfortunate if you do not investigate thoroughly the significance of these buildings. Once you tear down the buildings, they are gone forever.

I was informed that many community groups are supporting the preservation of these buildings and it would really be an asset to reuse them to compliment Alameda's reuse of the Naval base buildings, the US Hornet and the Alameda Naval Air Museum.

I am frustrated that Alameda Point Collaborative informed the public that they will REUSE the buildings and not a word was said about demolishing them. The city of Alameda has reused other significant historical buildings, i.e. Alameda High School and City Hall auxiliary offices until available monies could be used to renovate Alameda school which is now what is our "Jewel". The same is true with the Navy Base, both properties at one time had discussions of being demolished.

Please do not let political pressure effect your judgement and keep these buildings on the Historical Advisory board study list.

Thank you,
Susan Aschwanden

Dear Historical Board Members,

Alamedans have been lied to by Alameda Point Collaborative. After many years since APC has been leasing the federal buildings at 620 Central and demonstrating to Alamedans its architectural plans to remodel these historic military buildings and putting our citizens through an election process and with all this time that has gone by, now Alameda Point Collaborative is applying for the demolition of the two main buildings and four other structures. Does this sound like APC was honest with us?

Please SAVE our historical military history by "reusing" these historic buildings and do what Alamedans voted for..... to "Reuse the federal buildings".

Dear Historical Advisory Board Members,

I am writing to ask that you please keep the property at 620 Central Ave. on the Historical Advisory Board Study List.

This property represents an important part of Alameda's history as well as State, National and World History.

This is an important historical site, and our community should strive for its preservation. Alameda is deeply rooted in its military history, known worldwide for its significant contributions and efforts in WWII.

The site at 620 Central Ave was one of only two officers training facilities in the nation for the Merchant Marines--a branch that began as a civilian corp and later was recognized as veterans decades decades later in 1988.

The Merchant Marines delivered the essential cargo supplies that supported the Troops and Allies. They navigated ships with a bare-bones crew of approximately 50 sailors, while typical Naval ships had over 200+.

They sadly suffered the highest casualty rate of all military groups 1:26 died in WWII. Without their heroic efforts, we could not have attained a victorious outcome.

A Congressional Gold Medal of Honor was attributed to the entire group of Mariners serving in WWII in March, 2020 (H.R. 5671 in 116th Congress).

In addition to enumerating the myriad contributions made by this group and listing important quotes from leaders at the time, the text of the resolution also states:

“The feats and accomplishments of the Merchant Marine are deserving of broader public recognition.”

Due to the historical marginalization of this service branch, most physical evidence of the tremendous expansion of Merchant Marine operations in wartime have been demolished, as training and infrastructure facilities have been repurposed or sold for private use. There are currently no sites or buildings specific to WWII era training of the U.S. Merchant Marine remaining.

The training facility in Alameda, while having been modestly repurposed by other federal agencies, is currently at risk of wholesale demolition and I believe that future adaptive reuse of the structures is the best outcome for our community.

We should strive to preserve original elements of the facility and commemorative information be made available onsite. The remarkable history of this group of young mariners should be preserved for future generations.

Community groups that are supporting preservation of the property include:

The USS Hornet

The Alameda Naval Air Museum

The Alameda Architectural Preservation Society

American Merchant Marine Veterans National Organization and 1000 supporters through a petition that was circulated by the veterans group

An application to the National Register of Historic Places is currently being submitted. Please wait until historians are able to make a comprehensive evaluation of the property.

For these reasons I respectfully ask the Historical Advisory Board to please keep the property on the historical advisory board list.

Dear Historical Advisory Board Members,

My name is Feliciano Fortuna, my family and I are long time residents of Alameda. I currently am 96 years old and my family and I arrived as a young military family. I served in the Korean and the Vietnam Wars. I have seen lots of changes in Alameda but one underlying thread is that Alameda has always been a military town and there has been history built within this town because of its military. I do not agree that the Federal buildings at 620 Central Ave be delisted from Historical Building Study List. Alameda's Merchant Marines are deserving recognition for what they have accomplished and to tear down these buildings is a disgrace because we should strive to preserve these buildings and Alameda's military heritage.

Since I cannot drive anymore, my daughter brought me to the Alameda Naval base about a year ago and I was thrilled to see how they reused many of the buildings for brewery's and businesses. Alameda Point Collaborative's flyers promised to REUSE the buildings and Alamedans voted accordingly in the election but I am disappointed that the applicant did not keep his promise and is currently applying to demolish these historical buildings..

Many of my fellow veterans have already passed on and I want to speak up for them. Please carefully take the above points into consideration before making a decision which could irrevocably destroy an important part of Alameda's military history.

Sincerely,

I have been a resident of Alameda since 1965. As a local realtor for 48 years, I have long respected your organization and our City's care regarding our historical properties. You have the very important responsibility to protect our local and state history and the properties which have been involved.

I am hoping you will not bend to political pressure and will preserve this important piece of our Alameda history. My partner Alan Boyd Case who was a Merchant Marine sea captain felt strongly about the Merchant Marine training facility and its important contribution to our country during World War II.

Please allow the time and research needed to preserve this historic property.

Dear Members of the Alameda Historical Review Board:

The heroism and sacrifices of the merchant marines in World War 2 and in the Korean War are often overlooked and under-appreciated. More than 215,000 recruits joined the United States Maritime Service during the Second World War, sailing Liberty ships and other vessels essential for transporting troops and supplies for the war effort. Recruits as young as 16 who were too young to join the armed forces, retired seaman and men rejected from the armed services due to medical conditions readily volunteered to serve the war effort by signing up for the Maritime Service. The Merchant Marines were the only racially-integrated service at the time. They sailed in waters that were mined, were frequently torpedoed by German submarines and were attacked by enemy aircraft. They operated anti-aircraft weapons and canons. They are estimated to have suffered the greatest percentage casualty rate of any of the services. Unofficial statistics cite 8,651 casualties at sea while an additional 1,100 died of wounds onshore, 11,000 wounded, 604 taken prisoner and 60 dying in prison camps. In 1945, President Dwight D. Eisenhower proclaimed "The officers and men of the Merchant Marines, by their devotion to duty in the face of enemy action, as well as natural dangers of the sea, have brought us the tools to finish the job. Their contribution to final victory will be long remembered."

Unfortunately, after the war the Merchant Marines became the all-but-forgotten war service and were denied all GI benefits that would have allowed them to rebuild their lives through aid for education, were denied healthcare and medical treatment for their war injuries in the Veterans Administration hospitals and clinics and were denied all other veteran benefits.

At the outbreak of WW2, only 2 maritime officer training schools were established in the entire country, one in Connecticut and the other in Alameda. The Alameda US Maritime Officers Training School was the only one actually built during WW2. The official opening ceremony for the school was broadcast live nationally on the radio and by short-wave radio to the troops overseas. Live national radio broadcasts from the school's auditorium during the war featured entertainers such as the Tommy Dorsey band and Jack Benny. Of the 6,513 officers trained at the Officer school in Alameda, 51 died in the war effort. The Maritime Officers school in Alameda also played a vital role training officers and seamen for the Korean War.

The Alameda Historical Review Board is being asked today to decide whether to repeal the Historical Study List “S” designation which will allow the developer, Mr. Doug Biggs, of Alameda Point Collaborative, to proceed to demolish all of the structures on the 3.65-acre parcel that remains of the former 32-acre site of the Officers school. The Board will review the 1996 report by Page and Turnbull to determine the historical and architectural significance of the site. This 1996 report evaluated a larger 7.6 acre parcel, not the diminished 3.65-acre site under current review. The report makes clear that the site has historical “significance” for World War 2 and quite possibly “exceptional significance” for the Korean War period. It points out that the Engineering building (Building 1) is of paramount historical significance due to its “direct relation to the mission” of preparing maritime officers for the war.

Regarding the architectural importance of the site, the remaining buildings are described in the report as belonging to the Modern Movement/International style with long, horizontal lines, deeply cantilevered roof overhangs and continuous bands of windows. The report states the school “possesses significance for its design as a rare example of an early modern campus design and as an example of a Bay Region style complex and as an exemplification of WW2 planning and design.” The report also points out that “Their lack of ornamentation, monolithic use of materials, considered proportions and horizontal character indicate the presence of design intention inspired by the modern era in which the facility was designed and constructed.”

Other sources discuss the scarcity of building materials and skilled labor due to the pressing needs of the war. During the war, the Maritime Service needed to have buildings constructed quickly and easily by using uncomplicated plans, avoiding unnecessary ornamental embellishments and making substitutions for various scarce materials such as lumber and nails. The visual appearance of the buildings remaining on the 3.65-acre parcel tell this story of the urgency of the rapid construction and the resourcefulness regarding the materials chosen in a time of war. The 1996 reports also states “the buildings of the Federal Center are in remarkably good and updated condition, with few apparent deficiencies.”

The 1996 report recommended against National Register of Historic Places at that time for a “historic district” in large part due to demolitions of earlier buildings on the formerly larger site and against historic designation on the individual buildings which had suffered a loss of integrity “through painting and window replacement”. Other noted modifications were changes to building interiors and to exterior staircases. These, however, are remediable conditions: the buildings can easily be repainted the original color, windows and exterior staircases can be replaced to resemble the originals and to conform to current code requirements. Any adaptive reuse of these buildings would in any event most likely require some additional interior modifications. Many, if not most, buildings considered for potential historic preservation have had at least some architectural modifications over the years. The question should be not whether modifications have occurred but rather if these modifications are relatively easy to remediate to restore the architectural integrity of buildings which are clearly historically significant. In the case of the buildings on the parcel under consideration, it is clearly possible to significantly restore architectural integrity to Buildings 1 and 2.

Specifically regarding the Engineering Building (Building 1), the 1996 report indicates only some of the original windows have been replaced. A movie about the Training School made during the war shows interior shots of the Engineering building with large open, high-ceiling spaces. Much of the subsequent modification and subdivision of the interior into 2 levels can be demolished to restore the building to more closely resemble the original one-story, more-open design.

Building 2D, originally housed the mess hall and galley and served as the hub of the Officers school and housed offices, maintenance shop and boiler room on the first floor and one large, open assembly space with a smaller connecting space for serving food on the second floor. The interior plan of this building does not appear to have been significantly modified. The basic plan of Buildings 2A, 2B and 2C have not been altered.

Alan Tai, of the Alameda Planning Department, informed the Historical Review Board at its March 4, 2021 meeting that the City of Alameda's guidelines focus primarily on whether a building merits the "S" designation based on its physical appearance. He stated the buildings were "not architectural masterpieces" and were "not part of the character of the neighborhood or the street". If the physical appearance is the primary focus in determining S-listing designation, then any modifications to interiors of buildings should be largely irrelevant in the Planning Department's recommendation regarding whether to remove the S designation. The 1996 report's mention of loss of architectural integrity caused by interior modifications should have no bearing on the S designation. Additionally, given that the parcel's buildings pre-date the 1960-1970's construction of the condominium complexes on either side of it or the 1980's-era shopping center across the street from it, they are prominent in the neighborhood because of their WW2-era military design and construction and their Bay Region style.

Unfortunately, there does not appear to have been an effort by the Planning Department to locate documents to understand why the site was originally placed on the study list or any attempt to research the historical significance of the site to Alameda or to the nation. The physical appearance of the facades of the buildings was the primary criterion considered. According to Mr. Tai, there was "nothing unique about the design significance" of the buildings on the parcel. The visual review of the physical appearance of the buildings, a brief excerpt from the 1996 report contained in a 2003 exchange of letters between the federal government and the California Office of Historic Preservation and a judge's decision to uphold the Mitigated Negative Declaration environmental document were sufficient for the Planning Department to make its recommendation for delisting. No attempt was made by the Planning Department to obtain or review the actual 1996 report. Mr. Tai asserted that no additional studies or experts were needed before recommending delisting of the property because the Planning Department relies on the Office of Historic Preservation's analysis which in turn was based on the 1996 report. The California Office of Historic Preservation never visited the site, never did its own independent evaluation and solely based its 2003 recommendation on the 1996 report. The judge in the court case never reviewed any documents regarding the historical significance of the site.

Since the Planning Department used the judge's decision on the Mitigated Negative Declaration as one of the reasons that form the basis of their recommendation for delisting, it would be useful to mention a bit more about this particular judge. This judge was one of the only 4 judges out of almost 1,600 California judges under the jurisdiction of the California Commission on Judicial Performance to have been publicly admonished in 2020 for his conduct in 2 other unrelated cases in which he "displayed a lack of the dispassionate neutrality and the courtesy to others that is expected of judges". He essentially acted as an advocate for one party against the other. As rare and disgraceful as public judicial admonishment is, this was not the first disciplinary action received by this particular judge and clearly marks him as an extreme outlier among judges. Articles regarding his public admonishment appeared in newspapers such as the San Francisco Chronicle and Mercury News.

Summarizing the 3 primary criteria cited for the Planning Board's recommendation for delisting:

1. Physical appearance. Where the Planning Department saw "no architectural masterpieces", the Page and Turnbull 1996 report saw that the site "possesses significance for its design as a rare example of an early modern campus design and as an example of a Bay Region style complex and as an exemplification of WW2 planning and design."
2. The 1996 report. The Page and Turnbull report was never read by the Planning Department.
3. The judge's decision. This judge has been disciplined by the California Commission on Judicial Performance for his actions in multiple cases. He has displayed a lack of "dispassionate neutrality" and has acted as an advocate for one party against the other.

One other assertion made during the Board meeting of March 4, 2021 was that if the buildings were not deemed worthy of preservation when the 1996 report was written, they must therefore have even less historic value now. This assertion ignores the unique documented historical significance of the property and the fact that fewer and fewer of similar WW2-era buildings still exist as the years have gone by. Even the Education building, cited in the 1996 report, as having major historical significance due to its essential connection to the mission of the Officers school has since been demolished. The maritime training facility at Sheepshead's Bay in NY was razed in 1960 to make way for a community college. Other than a museum covering the entire history of the U.S. Maritime Service in King's Point, New York, there does not appear to be anywhere else in the United States a museum dedicated to the heroic service of the merchant marines during WW2 and the Korean War.

In his March 4 presentation to the Historical Review Board, Mr. Biggs pointed out what he claimed were more significant structures now in Crab Cove Regional Park that commemorate the former U.S. Maritime Officers Training School. This suggestion was meant to justify his plan to demolish the remaining buildings on the 3.65-acre parcel. These included a concrete marker to graduates from "this station" who died in WW2 and the former seamanship building. Unfortunately, the concrete marker nowhere mentions the Officers School or the officers who died and it is impossible to know what "this station" refers to as the buildings that once surrounded the marker have long since disappeared and the marker is now surrounded by open space. The marker sits in the middle of a grassy area of the park taken over by geese whose copious droppings keep park visitors far away from it. The former seamanship building is being used for park operations and is fenced off from public access.

The municipal code requires that buildings on the historical study list must first come before the Historical Review Board before going to design review. This was never done. Mr. Biggs won approval for his plan for exterior changes on Building 2 in design review and subsequently at appeals before the Planning Board and the City Council. After spending all of this time and expense obtaining architectural plans and administrative approvals, Mr. Biggs reports that due to the cost of a seismic retrofit and how it would destroy the nature of Building 2, he now wishes to demolish it entirely. It is unclear why this cost and impact of seismic retrofit were not considered earlier in the process before going to design review. He also wishes to demolish Building 1, stating "From Day 1, the intention was to tear down Building 1 for the medical respite program. Go back and look at the campaign materials and it was very clear that building was not staying." In fact these materials show the exact opposite. On the initial application that Mr. Biggs submitted to the federal government in order to obtain the property he wrote: "The Collaborating Partners are proposing the renovation and reuse of Buildings 1, 2A and 2D comprising a total of 59,167 square feet." In his public presentations promoting his project he distributed handouts and showed a slide entitled "Project Site: Proposed Adaptive-Reuse" which showed how Buildings 1 and 2 would each be reused. On the voter information site of the League of Women Voters of Alameda, Mr. Biggs was listed as an official supporter of Measure A which appeared on the ballot in the special election of April, 2019. The League of Women Voters of Alameda's voter information site states "Supporters say ...This Measure takes advantage of an opportunity to save money by using existing buildings on surplus government property". The wording of Measure A specifically states that it will "permit the reuse of vacant federal buildings" and the accompanying supporting argument in the sample ballot distributed to voters states that Measure A "takes advantage of an incredible opportunity to save money by using existing buildings on surplus government land". His caringalameda.org website continues to tout "The surrounding neighborhood will benefit from the transformation of vacant buildings into well-designed, landscaped and attractive facilities." From Mr. Biggs' assertion made at the March 4, 2021 at Historical Review Board Meeting that the plan from Day 1 was to tear down Building 1, and his announcement to tear down Building 2, it is clear that he has lied about his intentions to the federal government, the League of Women Voters of Alameda, the voters of Alameda and now, as well, to the members of this Board.

In considering its decision regarding the S designation of this property, it might be useful to acknowledge the obvious elephant in the room. This decision will be made in a charged political environment and with litigation pending. Starting in late-2018, proponents of the Open Space initiative gathered nearly 7,000 signatures of Alameda voters to qualify the initiative for the next general election ballot in November, 2020. The Open Space zoning change would allow the current buildings on the 3.65-acre parcel to be reused for uses typically found in parks, such as recreation facilities and museums. In response, in January, 2019, Mr. Biggs wrote a letter to the City Manager documenting how he might lose funding for his proposed project if a vote on the proposed zoning change had to wait until November, 2020. In response the City Council voted to call a snap special election for April, 2019 after adopting its own initiative (Measure A) which would allow Mr. Biggs' a better chance to secure funding. The City Council then labeled the Open Space initiative Measure B. Among those voting for this special election were a councilmember who was also a former board member of Alameda Point Collaborative and who chose not recuse himself and two other councilmembers who have been found by an Alameda County grand jury to have committed malfeasance in office for violating the city charter's prohibition against cronyism and favoritism by exerting political influence in the hiring decision for a new fire chief. The prohibited political influence of these 2 councilmembers forced the City to pay a $945,000 settlement when it was sued because of their actions.

This special election cost the City of Alameda approximately $900,000. There would have been only a minimal charge to the city had these initiatives waited until the next general election in November, 2020. Additionally, in the litigation that subsequently ensued, 2 teams of lawyers from international law firms plus the city's own attorneys argued against a single attorney working pro bono who challenged the City's actions on environmental and other procedural grounds. Given the actions of the City Council to call the expensive special election in order to assist Mr. Biggs to obtain funding for his proposed project and the legal time and expense invested by the city attorneys in defending his proposed project, it would be naive to expect the Planning Department to give an analysis regarding the S designation of the property totally divorced from the political wishes and influence of city officials who have been so determined to see Mr. Biggs' project proceed.

On his application to obtain the property from the federal government he was required to confirm "that the property is suitable for the proposed use and/or provide plans for its conversion". Mr. Biggs responded "The property is suitable for the proposed use." If Mr. Biggs now feels the buildings on the federal parcel no longer meet the needs of his proposed project, there are other alternatives. The City of Alameda has solicited bids from commercial developers for an available 32-acre site at Alameda Point. The State has told the City that a new law which took effect in January, 2021 requires the City to first allow affordable-housing developers an opportunity to submit bids. The City Manager confirms there is nothing that would prevent Mr. Biggs from submitting a bid for a portion of that property where his proposed project could be built. With the money he would save by not having to pay for toxics remediation and demolition of the buildings on the McKay Avenue site and with funding he has obtained, he would have enough money to buy a similar or even larger parcel at Alameda Point from which toxics have already been cleared. Other alternative parcels could also be considered. This would eliminate the need to demolish rare, historically-significant buildings that remain among the last-standing vestiges in the entire nation of the U.S. Maritime Service's heroic efforts and sacrifices in WW2 and the Korean War.

At the March 4, 2021 meeting of the Historical Review Board in response to the Board's request, Mr. Biggs agreed to try to obtain the 1996 Page and Turnbull report and he reminded the Board that people were dying on the streets while the Board was considering its decision on his application to remove the S designation from the 3.65-acre parcel. Yet while Mr. Biggs stresses the need for action to get people off the streets immediately, his initial application to the federal government for the property states and that it will take him 36 months to complete his project. The estimated cost will be more than $400,000 for each small room that will be built. While the State and other California cities are finding ways to quickly and more affordably provide immediately-needed housing by purchasing and converting hotels and other buildings and by building communities of container homes, prefabricated homes and tiny homes, Mr. Biggs' proposed project will take a number of years to build and cost much more than other housing options being created elsewhere. It is both unnecessary and unconscionable to demolish the remaining historic buildings of the U.S. Maritime Officers Training School in Alameda, and further erase the legacy of the Merchant Marines, in order to allow this politically well-connected developer to put up a purpose-built trophy property that will take years to build when other locations for his project are currently available.

Respectfully,

Harvey Rosenthal

Dear Historical Advisory Board Members,

I am writing in support of preservation of the Federal Property at 620 Central Ave., currently slated to be delisted from the Historical Advisory Board Study List.

The property tells an important Alameda story because during a large portion of the 20th century the island developed as a military town. The structure in question was a Maritime Officers School during the US involvement in WWII, from 1942-1947, and then served as a Maritime Service Training Station during the Korean War through the late 50's. Because most servicemen with personal connections to the place have already passed — and, indeed, many of them did not return from wars — it's important to preserve the building as a testament of history.

Coming from Europe, I find that in this country the history of the Second World War is often neglected. It's actually pretty amazing to me how little interest the US pays to it. For instance, VE Day is not a major holiday.

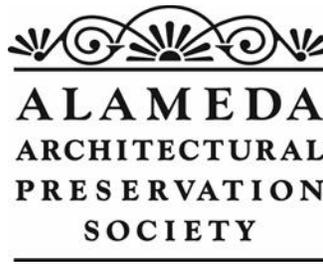

Moreover, in a region like ours where we don't have very many historic artifacts to begin with, preserving the building offers a rare opportunity to tell the story of Alameda while also highlighting the events crucially important to our nation, and the world as a whole.

I know research is currently being conducted into the architectural significance of the building, although it's going slow because of the pandemic. There is also an application currently submitted to the National Register of Historic Places. I feel that we at least need to pause until historians are able to make a full evaluation of the property because it should have some value for future generations.

Subject: Proposed delisting of 620 Central Avenue (originally the U.S. Maritime Officers Training School) from the Historical Building Study List -- (Item 7-A on Historical Advisory Board's May 6, 2021 Agenda)

Dear Boardmembers:

The Alameda Architectural Preservation Society (AAPS) would like to thank planning staff for arranging preparation of the Memorandum of Opinion by Page and Turnbull for the subject property that updates Page and Turnbull's original 1996 reports. However, the Memorandum's application of the National and California Registers' integrity standards to a local register inappropriately preempts the HAB's discretion to interpret the Historic Preservation Ordinance's more flexible Historical Monument and Study List eligibility criteria, including the integrity criteria.

The Memorandum offers the opinion that the buildings on the subject property are not eligible as Alameda Historical Monuments nor for the Study List, primarily due to lack of integrity related to alterations. However, the Memorandum correctly notes on pp. 12-16 that the City's guidance (including presumably the City's Historic Preservation Ordinance, which sets forth the criteria for Historical Monument and Study List eligibility) "does not clearly state (emphasis added) criteria for significance or thresholds for integrity necessary for designation of properties as Historical Monuments" and that "in the absence of explicit local guidance" the Memorandum is based on the California and National Register integrity criteria.

Of the buildings on the subject property, Building 1 (Engineering Building) and Building 2 (Mess Hall and Barracks) appear to be the most significant. As described in more detail on pp4-6 of the Memorandum, the exterior alterations to these buildings appear mostly limited to painting the original asbestos shingle siding, replacing the windows, demolition of three of Building 2's six wings with related alterations to the remaining three wings, replacing some exterior stairs and doors and, for Building 1, infill of the dock area, conversion of the original full height clerestory shop space to the current 1 1/2 story configuration, conversion of another shop space to a loading and receiving area and demolition of a boiler room.

Despite these changes, comparison of 1940s photos with the current condition of the buildings indicates that the remaining portions of the buildings retain most of their original appearance and, given their size and proximity, still convey a sense of a large scale complex. In consideration of this, and given the importance of the complex to Alameda's role in World War II and the Korean War and the flexibility of Alameda's Historic Preservation Ordinance's Study List eligibility criteria, the case can be made that the buildings are still eligible for a purely local historic register such as the Study List and even as part of a Historical Monument, which could also include the important surviving offsite buildings, such as the Seamanship Building (aka "Boat Building").

We would like to emphasize that the primary issue before the HAB on May 6 is whether the subject buildings are still eligible for the Study List. It is outside the HAB purview to address issues such as the buildings' economic viability or the appropriateness of any facility that might replace them if the buildings are demolished.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment. Please contact us if you would like to discuss these comments.

Alameda Citizens Task Force

Vigilance, Truth, Civility

Dear Alameda Historical Advisory Board:

We are Alameda Citizens Task Force (ACT), a group of local active concerned citizens, and we are writing to urge you to maintain the historical designation for the parcel at 620 Mackay Avenue.

Below we outline a case for its historical significance and explain why this matter has recently become more urgent.

1) The case for historical significance

Reference is made to the extensively researched 1996 report authored by Page and Turnbull discussed and requested in the HAB March 4 meeting (PT1996). While it is noted that PT1996 deemed the site ineligible for consideration on the National Registry of Historic Places, we respectfully suggest that some significant context was de-emphasized in the report, and additional context has occurred since the report was written. Furthermore, a decision for national eligibility does not automatically dictate a local or state decision. We also believe that Alameda has a unique and rich military history, and we should strive for its preservation based on the important people who trained here and went on to support the heroic efforts that led to victory in WWII.

To recap - the U.S. Maritime Service Officers School at the site (part of the U.S. Merchant Marine - U.S.M.M.), was one of only two locations during WWII where an unlicensed seaman could come ashore and train to become an Officer in an intensive 4-month course. During the Korean War, it was the only such facility. The other WWII site - at Fort Trumbull, CT- has no remaining structures from this period (it is a much older facility and retains other historical aspects). PT1966 doesn't mention this, nor does it mention that the large U.S.M.M. facility in Sheepshead Bay, New York, has been entirely demolished and replaced with a community college. While PT1996 acknowledges how important the U.S.M.M. role was in winning the war, it omits the fact that the U.S.M.M. is understood to have had the highest casualty rate of any branch of service during WWII (1 in 26, vs 1 in 34 Marines, 1 in 48 Army, and 1 in 114 Navy killed or wounded). Thus, the idea that buildings at the 620 McKay location may be some of the last remaining structures associated with the WWII-era U.S.M.M. - the service branch with the highest casualty rate- seemed to have not been contemplated.

In terms of evolving context, given the recent national and local reckonings of historic racial injustice, the history associated with the structure in its subsequent capacity as field office for the Bureau of Indian Affairs (1968-1980) seems relevant and worthy of some form of commemoration. PT1996 notes a protest (1968), occupation (1970- organized by a leader in the concurrent Alcatraz occupation), and even bombing (1975) of structures at the site. Alameda just renamed a prominent local park for its pre-contact inhabitants (Chochenyo), and it would seem inconsistent to cover up this (however uncomfortable) episode in our history.

Lastly, at the time of the PT1996, there were no definitive plans to develop the Alameda Naval Air Station, which wasn't decommissioned until the following year. Thus, the conversation about where and how to preserve Alameda's important legacy in WWII - in light of inevitable large scale land reuse - hadn't really begun in 1996. A subsequent report from 2003 conducted by the state did not add additional research, and merely cited the 1996 report as a de facto opinion on the McKay site. Similarly, plans for developing Alameda Point were not in place in 2003 either.

We think the site's significance should be revisited, especially given the scarcity of U.S.M.M. symbols nationally, as well as the relatively recent redevelopment of Alameda Point.

2) The case for urgency

As you know, a petitioner in Alameda has requested that you remove the historical designation of the property, in conjunction with the results of a 2019 special election in Alameda (notably, Measure A). In that election, the voters of Alameda were presented with this specific language (emphasis added):

Shall an ordinance confirming the City Council's actions to permit reuse of vacant federal buildings on a 3.65-acre parcel on McKay Avenue and allow for the development of a wellness center for senior assisted living and supportive services for homeless individuals by changing the General Plan designation from "Federal Facilities" to "Office," removing the Government Combining District classification and maintaining the existing zoning district designation, be adopted?

As became apparent in your March 4 meeting, the petitioner is in fact planning on razing all of the buildings on the site. We think this represents a departure from what the voters entrusted the stakeholders to do, based on the wording of the ballot measure. Furthermore, in the leadup to the 2019 election, the petitioner conducted tours of the site, and outlined a vision for incorporating original structural elements into the design of the wellness center- in the spirit of adaptive reuse. We think the petitioner should sustain this vision and are concerned that the City may not enforce it, particularly given its active role via the Planning process in facilitating the petitioner's requests, as was evident in the March 4 meeting. In fact, we consider this a prime example of why the Historical Advisory Board exists - to prevent quick decisions for convenience which have the (perhaps unintended) effect of erasing history.

Given the increasing importance of preserving the memory of the U.S. Merchant Marine's vital role in WWII and the Korean conflict, and the change in petitioner intent with regards to preserving the physical structures of the site, we strongly urge you to consider maintaining the historical designation for the site. We think an ideal outcome is, should the petitioner proceed with plans to develop a wellness center, they do so by reusing the structures and incorporating commemorative aspects of its history into the design, something that the HAB can assist with, but only if the site's current designation is retained so that the HAB can retain a voice in how it is developed.

Sincerely,

Dear members of the HAB and to whom it may concern,

I am writing today to ask that the status of 620 Central Ave remain as in on the historic study list.

The site is one of the last of it's type, specific to WWII era Merchant Marine training. Please take some time to look into the references (below) collected by members of our community. Research is underway to discover the architect and other facts that make this site special.

Alameda has a unique history and people have a strong connection to this island. This is evident by the vast support received for the preservation and reuse of this site/building: 1000+ community members including the USS Hornet, the national American Merchant Marine Veterans, Alameda Architectural Preservation Society, Alameda Citizens Task Force, numerous Retired Navy Captains and many others.

I understand that the recent Page and Turnbull report did not evaluate the entire site at 620 Central Ave. which includes two additional buildings on EBParks land. The following statement deserves your consideration, "Viewed as a whole, the site is relatable and retains substantial aspects of historical significance that are worthy of preservation for possible National and California Registers under criteria that includes an association with People and Events in History and Architecture. These people were our community members who sacrificed their lives. These architects went on to influence institutional and residential architecture for decades. These are important aspects of the site that need to be addressed."

Regarding APC's process, it is important to note that the trust of the people of Alameda has been seriously eroded. To recall, APC mis-stated to the voters that the existing buildings at 620 Central were to be reused. Then APC sought design approval from the City Planning Dept., before addressing the building's historical listing. Planning approved the design (requiring a demolition). When asked about this impropriety, the Planning Department/Andrew Thomas, stated that the decision to demolish was based on "purely financial" reasons. I think the people of Alameda would like to hear these decisions and this rational questioned and deliberated as well.

Thank you for your attention,

Dear Historical Advisory Board:

It is with a heavy heart that I write to you regarding the dilapidated federal buildings on McKay Avenue. I am both embarrassed and appalled to be a lifetime resident of Alameda after seeing the thinly veiled comments received regarding the historic significance of this property as being some military legacy. Aren't these the same people that wanted the buildings torn down years ago to build a park? I find it interesting that now that it is slated to serve a vulnerable population it's historic! These people claim to be military families who want to preserve the dignity of the military. If that is the case then why don't they support a facility that will help unhoused terminally ill veterans? Wouldn't that be a better way to show your support all of you supposedly military families?

Dear Historical Advisory Board Members,

I am writing to express support for the staff recommendation to delist buildings at 620 Central from the historical buildings study list.

In 2019, the opposition did not want the wellness center project to go forward – they said it was to support our children’s future and they wanted these buildings to be turned into an open space park.

In 2021, the same opposition does not want the project to go forward – they are now saying it is to support our veterans by having these buildings to be preserved as a museum – the very same buildings they wanted to tear down just two years earlier.

The same individuals who were opposed in 2019 are again stirring up opposition by using a different approach to throw what they can and see what sticks. We need to call this for what it is – a stalling tactic to delay-and-kill a project that will save the lives of medically vulnerable individuals experiencing homelessness.

Page & Turnbull was unequivocal with their assessment of the property: “They are not eligible for listing on the National Register, California Register, on the Alameda Historic Monuments List, or on the Study List at any level.” Since 1996, the site has lost too much integrity to be considered historic to anyone – half of the property was transferred to East Bay Regional Parks and they razed the entire lot without a hint of opposition from anyone in 2017. It is remarkable that there is suddenly opposition now for the other half of the property that happens to have a goal of serving homeless individuals – where were they in 2017?

I ask that you please accept staff recommendations and delist this property. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Thanks,

I write concerning Agenda Item 7-A 2021-907 PLN20-0431 - Delisting from Historical Building Study List and Certificate of Approval - 620 Central Avenue scheduled for the May 6 meeting.

After touring the facility with APC Director Doug Biggs, and reading the Page & Turnbull report, I support the plan to delist the buildings in the project area from the Historical Building Study List. I believe that the Page & Turnbull report, and the 2003 correspondence between the OHP and the SHPO, discusses adequately that these buildings have lost much of their historic integrity, and therefore, would not be going forward as either state or historical resources as buildings. The purpose of the study list has been fulfilled, the buildings have been studied, and can be dropped from further study. As a former federal civilian employee, I have stayed in barracks of this era in North Charleston.

The history of the site itself seems significant, and I request that the board consider requiring historic interpretive signs or plaques be placed on the site as part of the project, for the Certificate of Approval. These signs could be upright, or embedded in the sidewalk in front of the buildings, and should cover an inclusive history of the site, including, but not limited to, the Merchant Marine Training Center years, the Federal Center years, the history of activism when the BIA located there, the murder in the line of duty of the FSIS inspectors in 2000, and Alameda's historic election of 2018 approving the use of the site for the Senior Housing and Medical Respite Center. I look forward to the opening day of this wonderful project with great anticipation!

I hope that the buildings on the adjacent property, outside the former Federal Center, would retain their position on the Historical Building Study List, to be studied further and one day to become an Alameda City Monument.

Thank you,

To the Members of the HAB Board and GSA:

-I strongly object to the proposal for the Federal Property at 620 Central Ave. to be delisted from the Historical Advisory Board Study List.

--The Historical Advisory Board should uphold the current status of the property and keep it on the Study List

--The property has historical significance as it was a WWII era Maritime Officers School, 1942-1947, and then served as a Maritime Service Training Station during the Korean War, 1947-1957. We should strive to preserve the history of this important time period and the people who sacrificed their lives.

--This property represents an important part of Alameda's history as well as State, National and World History.

--Alameda's military history is unique and we should preserve what remains of this particular site as a visual reminder of the efforts set forth by the Merchant Marines.

--This property is a rare and early example of an architectural movement that emerged called the International "Moderne" Movement in the Second Bay Tradition. The architect is currently unknown, but efforts are being made to research who the architect was. Because archives are currently closed, please give researchers additional time before considering delisting and/or demolition.

Dear Historical Advisory Board Meeting:

I am very upset that anyone is considering to tear down the historic Merchant Marine building.

My grandfather was in the navy during WWII in the North Atlantic. He worked on submarines protecting the cargo ships carrying supplies to UK. He always had the highest respect for the Merchant Marine men and women. He would say: "Before the draft, when the country came calling for dedication, the civilian sailors came forward first." The value of the Merchant Marine to Allied victory has been slow to arrive in history books, but economists, Navy, and Generals have long known. The Merchant Marine were "First Responders" of their era.

Show respect for the men and women of the Merchant Marine, and do everything possible to keep that building intact. It is an important part of Alameda, national and world history.

If you believe history is worthless, then tear it down.

If you believe history helps us to better understand the present and future – then do NOT tear down the Merchant Marine building on McKay Ave.

HISTORICAL ADVISORY BOARD MEMBERS, what an important part you play in preserving Alameda's history.

As you know, the solidly built property located at 620 Central Avenue housed the Maritime Officers School in the years 1942-1947 and then served as a Maritime Service Training Station during the Korean War 1947-1957.

IT IS TOO IMPORTANT AN EDIFICE TO BE DEMOLISHED!

My husband, Glen was a proud member of the Marine Firemen's Union and shipped out as a merchant seaman from West Coast ports. I am the volunteer librarian at the Alameda Naval Air Museum. I know first hand the profound contribution Alameda made to the war effort influencing our nation's history and world history.

I am asking you not to delist 620 Central Avenue from your Study list. Please wait to make a decision until historians are able to make a full evaluation of the property.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Dear Members of the Alameda Historical Board,

The former Merchant Marines School during WWII in Alameda was a BIG deal! If you read up on Alameda's Merchant Marines history at this site and the dedicated men who went through rigorous and stiff training to become officers in the Merchant Marine after coming back from naval tours being bombed at, shot at, and seeing fellow mariners having lost their lives, these men are Alameda's HEROES.

" Unlike most officer candidates, these men are "veterans" of this war. They've spent at least 14 months at sea which means most of them have been exposed to enemy attack. Many of them have seen direct action with either enemy submarines or planes. They've been all over the world, carrying supplies to the remote bases on Iceland, Alaska and the pinpoint spots in the Atlantic and Pacific; they've been in on island invasions and took part in the initial attack on North Africa; they were busy ducking shrapnel and firing at Messerschmitts when Sicily and Italy were invaded. Maybe they'll be back at sea when the long awaited second front is opened. All of the men are veterans in the war at sea and they all have one immediate --- and difficult --- goal to reach. That goal is acquiring their officer's papers. " (cited from American Merchant Marines at War)

WHAT AMAZING STORIES OF OUR HISTORY! I have lived most of my life in Alameda, living in the Navy Housing and going to school in the west end, I am just now learning about this special place right in our city. The past accomplishments, dedication, ultimate sacrifices of these men who came to Alameda' Merchant

Marine School needs to be preserved so that future generations will know why this place was so vital to winning the most important war that the world was ever involved in.

Please do not remove this important Historical site from the historical study list, only to be demolished and gone forever. This site is just one of a few left in the entire country that still exists.

How lucky we are to have this place that we can commemorate to our Veterans. Do the right thing for Veterans. They did the right thing for us. Our war Veterans should be able to come to this place, read about the history fellow Veterans made and show Veterans our appreciation. Please do not let political pressure effect your judgement but LEAD, as those Merchant Marine officers did in WWII, to do the right thing.

PLEASE DO NOT DEMOLISH AND ERASE the history of Alameda's Merchant Marines's School. Resuse these historic federal buildings because Alamedans VOTED for "REUSE". Thank you for your consideration in this very important decision.

Sincerely,
Rosalinda Corvi

Dear City Officials,

As a resident of Alameda who has recently followed all of the rules and protocol to apply for permits appropriately, I find it unacceptable that this applicant proceeded to Design Review before going first to the Historical Advisory Board for approval, which is in non-compliance with the procedure;

Alameda Municipal Code 13-21-4 (b).

I object to the proposal for the Federal Property at 620 Central Ave. to be delisted from the Historical Advisory Board Study List for the reasons listed below:

The property is a visual reminder of the history and heritage of the City of Alameda, consistent with the stated efforts of the Alameda Historical Advisory Board. The property served as army and officer training center in the 1940's. Our Alameda military history is a reminder of those who faithfully served our country through their leadership and we should seek to preserve this heritage.

Similar buildings at the Presidio in San Francisco reflect this important era in our history and have been preserved for future generations as a visual reminder of the design, functionality and services they once provided.

Please reject the petition to delist the property at 620 McKay Ave from the Historical Advisory Board Study List.

Dear Historical Advisory Board,

I am a born and raised Alameda resident, who is in the process of renovating a home that I recently purchased at 516 Central, near Crab Cove. I chose this location because of its proximity to the precious shoreline, path and parks.

My three brothers, friends and I spent a great deal of our childhood playing at Crab Cove and Crown Memorial Beach and we have many fond memories of those carefree days. I learned a great deal about the local bay ecosystem and ecology by participating in Crab Cove Visitor Center lectures and nature explorations in the park and surrounding area. I want future generations to be able to have the same experience.

Now as an adult, I ride my bike, run and walk along the shoreline path on a daily basis and enjoy the diversity of residents and visitors who frequent the park.

I was pleased to learn that there is a concerted effort to help our homeless population, however I am extremely concerned about the location of a Permanent Supportive Housing facility for chronically homeless residents with complex medical and mental issues at this location next to a children's visitor center and regional park.

It is concerning that this proposal circumvents zoning which does not allow for a homeless shelter, by calling it a senior convalescent home. Furthermore a skilled nursing facility without the proper licensing should not be allowed, particularly in light of the current Covid-19 pandemic where nursing homes have been a hotspot of contagion.

I am an advocate for the fair enjoyment of the park and visitor center by everyone, but feel that there has not been enough discussion about how this unlicensed facility will impact the surrounding area and parks and what, if anything, is planned to remedy the situation if evidence of blight begins to occur along McKay Ave. and in the parks.

I urge you to consider this appeal seriously and not approve this design review.

Sincerely,

David

Dear members of HAB

Since HAB continued this question about the property on McKay avenue at its last meeting allowing for additional research to be done and the results are clear. As outlined in the assessment provided by Page & Turnbull, there is only one objective resolution - to delist the McKay Avenue property:

<http://alameda.legistar.com/gateway.aspx?M=F&ID=7505ddca-e2ea-41c4-9148-fbdf29a647bc.pdf>

The report clearly finds that neither the site as a whole nor individual buildings qualify to be listed on either the federal, state, or city historical lists.

The HAB should accept staff recommendations to delist the site. The transparent opposition to the delisting is not an attempt to preserve any history, it is an attempt to delay the project - this same, shameful group of people has repeatedly shown they will stoop to any level and will tell any lie to create a bad faith bureaucratic delay.

The HAB can not and should not consider the use of the building as a criterion for this decision. The history of the maritime school is already protected and displayed by EBRP at the Crab Cove visitor center – which was the infirmary of the maritime school. In addition to this building, there are three other historic structures – the boathouse, a barracks, and the merchant marine memorial that are being preserved and displayed by EBRP. Keeping the buildings doesn't help the community, it doesn't preserve any history (objectively) and doesn't help the homeless.

Many of the same people that have written in opposition to the delisting, also tried to get the site declared as open space and the buildings torn down, without going through any historical assessment. These same people are using the HAB as a pawn in their sad ploy to prevent unhoused neighbors from getting the care that they need. Please don't further capitulate to this small group of people committed to harming those most vulnerable in our community.

Thank you,
Laura Gamble

Members of the Alameda Historic Advisory Board:

I am writing to encourage the Board to allow sufficient time for completion of the current investigations analyzing the question of the historic value of the Marine Officers Training Site at Mckay Avenue and Central Avenue to be completed. I am referring to the evaluations that I am told are being conducted by both the State and Federal agencies charged with making such determinations.

At the very least, I believe it would be appropriate for the Board to inquire as to the progress of the above investigations before making any decision that might allow for destruction of the buildings which would also destroy the historic character of the site.

Thank you.

Dear Historical Advisory Board Members,

I am writing to ask that you keep the historical property at 620 Central Ave. on the historical advisory board study list, and deny APC's request to demolish the buildings. It is clear from the research presented to you that the site has historical significance as one of the few WWII era facilities left that tell the history of Alameda and the U.S. during WWII.

What is even more concerning to me, however, is that the move to demolish these buildings is part of a scheme by APC that was not disclosed to the public at the time APC was lobbying to be given the land. I recall many public comments by APC's leaders emphasizing that their project was a way to honor and preserve Alameda's historic structures by adapting them. I never heard that the plan was to demolish them and I think this "bait and switch" is outrageous. The Historical Advisory Board should not be complicit with this scheme. I urge you to do the right thing and not allow these buildings to be delisted and demolished.

At the very least, every opportunity must be given for the National Register process to continue uninterrupted.

As is often the case, this seems to be about money because it is likely cheaper for APC to raze the buildings rather than hold to their promises. What a breach of public trust that is. I respectfully ask that you use your authority to preserve these historically significant buildings in our community.

Thank you.

Hi Allen,

I noticed that the Alameda Federal Center is on your agenda again for the Historic Advisory Board's May 6 meeting. I just wanted to make sure that you have all the information you need from GSA. Really the only pertinent document we have is the 1996 Page & Turnbull report and the meat of that document is only 2-3 pages long and I believe you now have a copy of it.

The facts as I understand them are:

1. In 1978 Alameda Federal Center was included in Alameda's Historical Buildings Study List. It stated that there was potential historical merit, but further study was required.
2. In 1996 GSA prepared Historic Building Preservation Program (HBPP) documents for the Alameda Federal Center which stated that the site had historical significance, but there had been so many alterations and demolitions over the years that there wasn't much integrity.
3. In 2003 a Section 106 action by GSA determined that the entire Alameda Federal Center was not eligible for the National Register. This determination was based on the 1996 HBPP. SHPO concurred in writing.
4. Based on these results GSA demolished half of the buildings in the remaining complex and transferred the southern portion of the property to the East Bay Regional Park District on 11/9/2015.
5. Federal tenants continued to use the buildings on the northern portion of the property until approx. 2016.
6. Around 2018 the property was leased to Alameda Point Collective (APC), through Health and Human Services, for use under the McKinney Homeless Act. The property was not transferred outright at that time because APC was working on getting full funding for its complete project. APC's most recent plan, which is pending HHS's approval, is to demolish all remaining buildings and construct new facilities: a 50-bed Medical Respite Center; and 100 studio apartments (permanent supportive housing services for homeless seniors).
7. In anticipation of its upcoming project, APC recently requested that it be delisted from the Alameda Historical Buildings Study list. Based on this request, Alameda Historical Advisory Board asked GSA for a copy of the 1996 Building Preservation Plan, which we provided.

Intact, the property would have been eligible as a district for its role as a maritime training facility. However, much of the facility (approx 90 acres originally) was sold off and demolished in the early 1960s, including many of the primary character-defining elements such as the parade ground, indoor swimming pool, seamanship building, night-vision classroom, anti-aircraft building, the mast assembly, the pier, auditorium, etc. Of the buildings on the remaining 7.6 acres that were transferred to GSA in 1961, half of those buildings were subsequently demolished by the time GSA transferred property to the park district in 2015. All that's left now is the Engineering Building, a 1.5 story utility building, and a portion (half of it was demolished to make way for surface parking in 2015) of the Barracks Building, a 2 story former residential building that was converted into offices 50 years ago.

I don't believe that any recent actions warrant re-opening of the federal 106 process. The property was determined not eligible back in 2003 based on its lack of integrity. And after demolition of so many remaining buildings, we know the integrity has not improved. In my professional opinion, this property is not eligible for the National Register.

Dear Historical Advisory Board,

I'd like to thank the volunteer members of the HAB for their thoughtful review of this matter at the March 4, 2021 meeting. I also appreciate your acknowledgement of my letter and response to my speaking at the meeting about my concerns of demolishing the buildings.

I am writing again to encourage you to please keep the property on the Historical Study List and prevent the demolition planned by Alameda Point Collaborative.

Hopefully, after you had a chance to visit the property, you were able to determine that the buildings could, indeed, be repurposed as originally asserted by the City of Alameda and APC.

As a licensed General Contractor for 32 years specializing in remodels, I'm always drawn to how a space can be transformed in function to accommodate the homeowners need with the least amount of destruction (land fill waste,etc) and the least amount of disruption (noise, air pollution, etc.) to the occupants and the neighboring community. I'm also drawn to preserving the original era/design, whether I happen to like the style or not.

At the March 4, 2021 HAB meeting, I was saddened after listening to the dismissive and cavalier nature of the applicant and planning department staff in their collective finding of no redeeming value of the buildings. I was surprised at the criteria cited by staff for determining the 'worth' of such buildings being simply the merit of its architectural style. I would have hoped the 'historic use' of these buildings would have some implication and bearing on its suitability for destroying it.

The following is an excerpt from the City of Alameda webpage describing the Historical Advisory Board

PURPOSE

To promote the educational, cultural, and economic welfare of the City by preserving and protecting historical resources that serve as visible reminders of the history and heritage of Alameda.

I underlined the word 'visible' because buildings are visible reminders. I really believe there is merit in holding on to Alameda's historical legacy of military service in World War II. I think it would be especially important in light of the fact that many of the future clientele to be served in these buildings may be military veterans themselves.

Thanks again for your consideration in maintaining them on the Historical Study List.

Dear Sir/Madam, given the historical significance of Federal Property at 620 Central Avenue, I strongly object to the proposal that it be delisted from the Historical Advisory Board Study List. And while we are aware that an application has been, or is being, submitted to the National Register of Historic Places for the commutation of the property, we would strongly request that a decision on the future use of the property be postponed until the property has undergone a thorough evaluation by historians and other relevant stakeholders.

Very many thanks,

Dear Historical Advisory Board Members:

I've been an Alameda resident since 1977.

I respectfully request that you please keep the Federal property at 620 Central Ave. site on the HAB "S" Study List for the following reasons:

- This property represents an important part of Alameda City's history as well as California and US history.
- The buildings at this site were used by the US Merchant Marine to train sailors and officers in World War II and the Korean War. These buildings should remain standing as a visual reminder of Alameda's past Naval and Merchant Marine history.
- The US Merchant Marine played a vital role in the US victory in World War II by crewing the ships carrying food, medicine, and vital war supplies to the UK (United Kingdom) and the governments-in-exile residing there.
- At a crucial point in the war, the Nazis decided to force the UK to surrender by flooding the Atlantic with U-boats, which they hoped would sink enough supply ships to literally starve the UK out of the war. This did not happen, largely because of the courage and professionalism of US Merchant Marines. Due to those U-boats, the Merchant Marines had the highest casualty rate of all the US military branches in the war.
- Many famous Americans were Merchant Marines:
 - John Paul Jones served in the Merchant Marines and went on to become the "Father of the American Navy".
 - Writers Ralph Ellison, Herman Melville, Louis L'Amour, Jack Kerouac, and Jack Vance were all Merchant Marines.
 - Actors Peter Falk (Columbo), James Garner (Rockford Files), Jack Lord (original Hawaii Five-O), and Clint Walker (Cheyenne) all were Merchant Marines.

Please let's honor the memory of all those Merchant Marines who were trained here in Alameda by keeping these historic buildings.

Thank you for your consideration,

Ted McGavin

Members:

I am writing again as a concerned citizen of Alameda that continues to object to the proposal that the former Maritime Officers School be de-listed from the Historical Board Study.

The Historical Advisory Board should uphold the current status of the property and keep it on the Study List. The property has important historical significance and our island's unique military history should be preserved. Unfortunately, much of our history has been erased so we must be vigilant about retaining what is left and this property has both historical and architectural importance.

I am writing to respectfully request that you reject the application to de-list the property at 620 Central from the Historical Advisory Board Study List.

Thank you,
Kris Motola

Dear members of the Historic Advisory Board,

In addition to repeating my encouragement from two months ago, I would further encourage you to listen to Page and Turnbull in their April 2021 memo. They too are competent and professional people, and their Memorandum of Opinion confirms that the buildings ought to be delisted. The report on page 9 quotes the same evaluation quoted in my letter to this body two months ago. Nothing has changed.

Page and Turnbull conclude their analysis of Alameda's relevant policies, with emphasis added by me: *"In summary, while buildings within the subject property which were associated with the operation of the Maritime Service Officers School, including Buildings 1, 2, 8, and 10, possess historical significance as a grouping, as defined by the City of Alameda, they do not retain sufficient integrity to be eligible for inclusion in the Study List under Categories "S" or "N."*³³ Further, the buildings do not possess architectural significance or design integrity."

Your duty was clear in March, and 27 pages of a consultant report later, it's still clear. Delist the buildings, please.

With appreciation,
Gaylon Parsons

Dear members of the Historic Advisory Board,

I am writing to ask you to accept your competent and professional city staff recommendation regarding the properties referenced in Item 7-A. These properties should be delisted from the Historical Buildings Study List. If you do not trust staff, or wish to mollify constituents with a habitual distrust of city staff, I would point to this evaluation of the site on page 3 of Exhibit 4:

"Although the property has associations with World War II-era training of officers associated with the U.S. Maritime Service, it has lost considerable integrity of design, materials, setting, feeling, and association with its historic period of significance (1942-1957). Those structures that remain do not convey the special nature of the property's historic maritime training mission during and after World War II."

I would encourage the members to resist the bad faith arguments from those who wish to weaponize Preservation in service of exclusion and withholding needed services from the most vulnerable. I can't imagine that any member of the HAB would be comfortable with such an impact.

Thank you for your service,
Gaylon

Subject: [EXTERNAL] HAB Meeting: 5/6/21

Dear HAB Board,

I am writing to ask that you keep the historical property at 620 Central Ave on the historical advisory board study list, and deny APC's request to demolish the buildings. This WWII era site is historically significant and important to our community and to educate future generations.

Please consider the following:

- the scarcity of WWII era buildings
- an application has been submitted to National Register that includes all 3 related parcels
- Page and Turnbull does not address significant architects related to the site
- APC and the City of Alameda should request an Adaptive Reuse Feasibility Study instead of a demolition certificate

Please keep in mind that this issue is before you due to the fact that APC has radically changed the scope of their proposed use of this land and they are trying to use the HAB to achieve these new unapproved goals. APC, Allen Tai and the Planning Department he works for have argued the Page and Turnbull assessment that these buildings will not achieve National Historical Registry status is grounds for their demolition. That is ridiculous. These buildings hold an important chapter in our City's history and must be preserved and reused for our Community so they can tell their story and while providing a base for whatever future City uses they may employ.

Recent communication with Page and Turnbull and submitted to the HAB, suggest an evaluation for an "Adaptive Reuse Feasibility Study". Please ask that the City request this important study. This site is over 80 years old and represents a unique part of Alameda's maritime history.

As members of the HAB please also consider these historical facts:

The P&T report also does not mention that this facility is the last remaining site specific to WWII era Merchant Marine training. The other officer training facility at Fort Trumbull, CT has no WWII era buildings remaining, and the Cadet training sites at Sheepshead Bay and Coyote Point, San Mateo were entirely razed. Please don't allow this to happen in Alameda.

The site at Coyote Point was an early design of famed architect Gardner Dailey, and was highlighted in a MOMA exhibit in 1944 as an example of excellence in WWII military design. The Alameda site has similar architectural elements, and research is currently underway to determine who the architect was. Recently discovered architectural drawings confirmed that Joseph Esherick designed an addition to the US Maritime Training School in 1946. He was the famed architect of the Sea Ranch development that inspired generations of future architects.

Also, the recent Page and Turnbull report has significant flaws. Please don't base your decision on this. They only address APC's parcel and did not evaluate the entire listing site 620 Central Ave. which includes two additional buildings on EBParks land. Viewed as a whole, the site is relatable and retains substantial aspects of historical significance that are worthy of preservation for possible National and California Registers under criteria that includes an association with People and Events in History and Architecture. These people were our community members who sacrificed their lives. These architects went on to influence institutional and residential architecture for decades. These are important aspects of the site that need to be addressed.

Community groups met with the Planning Department recently to ask that they remain neutral and refrain from their aggressive push for demolition, stating also that residents voted for “reuse of buildings” in the 2019 special election. Planning chair Andrew Thomas stated that the decision to move forward with demolition “was purely financial”. This is not a good reason to delist a property from the HAB list and ignore the historical events and people that are important to the history of our community.

Supporters for preservation and reuse include over 1000+ community members including the USS Hornet, the national American Merchant Marine Veterans, Alameda Architectural Preservation Society, Alameda Citizens Task Force, numerous Retired Navy Captains, the President as well as the Director of Communications of the Masters, Mates and Pilots, one of the three largest maritime unions, local veterans who trained at the U.S. Maritime Officers school, and the son of the navigation instructor who spent the remainder of his career here.

This community support is what makes the site important—a visual reminder that connects us with people from our past. Please listen to the oral histories of Mariners during their training in WWII and how their experience shaped our victory.

APC has misled the community by stating in their campaign that buildings would be repurposed. Financial reasons are not a good reason to delist and demolish a historic property so a private developer can push their project. There is also a pending court case with APC for not following the proper protocol and going to the HAB Board before moving to Design Review. On their application, director of APC, Doug Biggs, falsely answered “NO” to the question: Property on Alameda Historic Buildings Study List. Their petition to delist and demolish are attempts to circumvent procedures in place to preserve and protect historic properties, including the CEQA environmental requirement.

Furthermore, when I attended the tour of the facility last week, members of our group asked to see the interior of the barracks. We were told “it was not on the tour” and there were “no expectations”. This was very disappointing and frankly contrary to what the public was told at the last HAB meeting.

I respectfully ask that you use your authority to preserve these historically significant buildings in our community. We have seen developers come and go throughout the years, destroying historic buildings along the way. Please don’t let that happen here.

Best,
Carmen Reid

I think, and it would be great if the applicant could consider its reuse- it looks like it might have a flexible footprint that might allow for feasible reuse. An adaptive reuse feasibility study may be a good next step to suggest to the HAB or the developer, prior to approving demolition permit.

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Alameda Training Facility WWII USMM

Mimecast Attachment Protection has deemed this file to be safe, but always exercise caution when opening files.

Good afternoon,

In reading through all the comments written from people all over the country but mostly from Alameda California on our petition with over 1000 signatures, I am in all of the dedication to the World War II Merchant Marine and the training facility in Alameda California.

I am sending you the list of signatures and I'm also sending you some of the impactful messages that were printed in the comment section. Yes these people took the time to write because most of them had fathers and grandfathers who trained there. They already destroyed Sheepshead Bay in New York which is so heartbreaking too many of us why are you wanting to do this to another facility. Some sign simply because they're tired of seeing our history being torn down day after day and have no relationship to the facility.

Too much of Alameda's history is being lost to development. The entire point of a site receiving historical designation is to preserve history. A historical site does not lose its history just because a developer finds preserving that site inconvenient.

I have a friend who is 95 and was a merchant Marine and would be honored to have this saved. He lives here in Alameda and would love to have him at a dedication fir the Merchant Marines

My dad was a gunner on a Merchant Marine Vessel during WWII, this is history and It's so sad to say that I believe in the future we will want reminders of the greatest generation and how they lived and respected the United States of America

Former 10 year Coast Guard member here and would really love to see this historical relic saved. So much history, importance and stories all created from this site and the role it held in multiple wars

In WWII, Merchant Mariners came from all corners of the United States of America to train at this former maritime school. These mariners in turn carried their newfound skills across the seas to engage in a global war, delivering the vital supplies necessary to fuel the Allied war machine. Today, the children, grandchildren, and other descendants of these WWII Merchant Mariners are likewise located all over the country. Their common bond is a mutual interest in preserving history... It should be understood that WWII could simply not have been won without the U.S. Merchant Marine. Despite tremendous losses (1 in 26 killed in service to our country), the U.S. Merchant Marine ultimately prevailed thanks to intense shipbuilding programs and dedicated training centers, such as the former site in Alameda. In fact, the U.S. Merchant Marine collectively delivered an average of 8,500 tons of cargo to Allied forces, every hour of every day, during the last year of the war! We must not allow the remaining property of this Merchant Marine school to lose its historical designation.

As a WWII Combat Veteran who graduated from Alameda's sister school, these schools provided the training which made the troop/materiel sea lift possible to win WWII.

Hello Clerk. Thank you for including this in the correspondence for the Historic Advisory Board meeting on Thursday.

Dear Historic Advisory Board Members,

Please reject this attempt to block the necessary, voter-approved Wellness Center by declaring it a historic building. The assessment shows that neither the site nor individual buildings are qualified to be listed on either the federal, state, or city historical lists.

The number of people who are forced to live and die in the street in the City of Alameda and Alameda County because there are too few affordable homes for extremely low-income people continues to grow while the wealthiest among us grow wealthier. The same people claiming they want to protect these structures previously advocated for them to be ripped down to create open space. It is unacceptable and inhumane to continue to block or slow progress on this center. We have the physical space, the funds, and the organizational capacity to literally house and provide care for people who need it the most. To block us from caring for our neighbors is cruel. Please, reject this attempt and all attempts in the future to block progress based on a claim that it is a historical site.

Thank you,

Grover Wehman-Brown

Dear Sir/Madam,

Given the historical significance of Federal Property at 620 Central Avenue, I strongly object to the proposal that it be delisted from the Historical Advisory Board Study List. And while we are aware that an application has been, or is being, submitted to the National Register of Historic Places for the commutation of the property, we would strongly request that a decision on the future use of the property be postponed until the property has undergone a thorough evaluation by historians and other relevant stakeholders.

Esteemed Historical Advisory Board,

I strongly oppose and object to the proposal for the Federal Property at 620 Central Avenue to be delisted from the Historic Building List or for the proposal of its demolition.

The delisting or approval of demolition of these historical buildings will set a precedent and will open the door for the delisting and demolition of every other building included in the study list. If you don't find these buildings historically and architecturally important enough to save - given all the overwhelming evidence before you - how do you expect to protect and preserve anything else? Most of the buildings included in the study list are houses. Our homes, whose only proof of their history are the families that inhabited them and who are now dead and gone. One by one they'll come up to the chopping block, and one by one you'll have no way to save them because if you approve this proposal, you will have paved the way for delisting and demolition.

How will we prove that our homes are important? That they're worth preserving? How will you ever make a case for preserving Alameda's remaining historic buildings if you don't save and preserve this one?

You, the Historic Advisory Board are our only hope and the only tool we have as residents of this beautiful and unique island, to fight back the special interests of developers, of the planning department and of individuals such as Doug Biggs, whose economic gain supersedes that of the preservation of Alameda's historic heritage. They don't care about our past or our future, they don't care about our homes or about our history. And if you approve this delisting, this demolition, it'll be the beginning of the end of hope for Alameda, because they will use this precedent to demolish every house and every building that stands in their way. Don't fall prey to the pressures of the political whims and the economic interests of developers and their enablers.

We are counting on you to fight for us and for the preservation of Alameda's historic assets.

Sincerely,

Conchita Perales
Alameda resident

Subject: [EXTERNAL] McKay Avenue Federal Property

Dear Alameda Historical Board,

I am against the proposal for the Federal Property at 620 Central Ave. to be delisted from the Historical Advisory Board Study List.

The Historical Advisory Board should uphold the current status of the property and keep it on the Study List

The property has historical significance as a WWII era Maritime Officers School, 1942-1947. It also served as a Maritime Service Training Station during the Korean War, 1947-1957. We should preserve the history of this era and insure that future Alamedans understand the important role Alameda played during this time period. A memorial plaque does not suffice.

This is not what Alamedans voted for when they approved the Wellness Center. The intention was to preserve and reuse the property, not to demolish it. Please maintain the property on the Historical Study List.

Sincerely,

Therese Hall

Alameda Historical Advisory Board,

Tonight the Historical Advisory Board decides whether to approve demolition of the historic buildings of the U.S. Maritime Service Officers' Training School on McKay Ave.

These buildings are on the Alameda's Historic Buildings Study List for good reason. Their walls hold the stories of the important role our city played in WWII Merchant Marine history. You have received a great deal of information from Alameda groups, citizens and even the Page & Turnbull report itself which acknowledge the historical importance and architectural significance of these structures. This is not a question of these buildings achieving National Registry status. It's simply a question of their importance to Alameda and that has been well established.

So as members of the HAB, it is your obligation to approve these buildings' place on the City Historical Building Study List and to oppose the demolition of our historic assets.

We are here tonight for no other reason than Doug Biggs and the board of the Alameda Point Collaborative have changed the size and the scope of the project that voters approved in 2019. If they would have proposed demolition of these historic buildings on the 2019 special election ballot, they surely would have lost. It's very ironic that Equity Community Builders (ECB), the developer partnered with APC, features on the front page of their website, three San Francisco Presidio rehabilitation projects of historic military buildings. However, here in Alameda, ECB proposes to demolish our history.

Please recognize that the Historical Advisory Board was created for the specific reason of keeping a check on local developers who would quickly trade our historical assets for short sighted financial gain. Despite the urging that you have received on how to vote from Alan Tai and the Planning Department, please keep focus on the HAB's independent role and the specific historical question at hand. These buildings deserve to be on our list and they should be preserved, restored and reused.

If you simply adhere to the guidelines and the purpose of your board, you can rest assured that you have achieved its mission to preserve our city's historical assets. Then, you can leave all of the politics behind.

Subject: [EXTERNAL] RE: Historical Advisory Meeting - APC

Dear Historical Advisory Board Members,

I am writing to ask that you keep the historical property at 620 Central Ave on the historical advisory board study list, and deny APC's request to demolish the buildings. This WWII era site is historically significant and important to our community and to educate future generations.

Please consider the following:

- the scarcity of WWII era buildings
- an application has been submitted to National Register that includes all 3 related parcels
- Page and Turnbull does not address significant architects related to the site
- APC and the City of Alameda should request an Adaptive Reuse Feasibility Study instead of a demolition certificate

Please keep in mind that this issue is before you due to the fact that APC has radically changed the scope of their proposed use of this land and they are trying to use the HAB to achieve these new unapproved goals. APC, Allen Tai and the Planning Department he works for have argued the Page and Turnbull assessment that these buildings will not achieve National Historical Registry status is grounds for their demolition. That is ridiculous. These buildings hold an important chapter in our City's history and must be preserved and reused for our Community so they can tell their story and while providing a base for whatever future City uses they may employ.

Recent communication with Page and Turnbull and submitted to the HAB, suggest an evaluation for an "Adaptive Reuse Feasibility Study". Please ask that the City request this important study. This site is over 80 years old and represents a unique part of Alameda's maritime history.

As members of the HAB please also consider these historical facts:

The P&T report also does not mention that this facility is the last remaining site specific to WWII era Merchant Marine training. The other officer training facility at Fort Trumbull, CT has no WWII era buildings remaining, and the Cadet training sites at Sheepshead Bay and Coyote Point, San Mateo were entirely razed. Please don't allow this to happen in Alameda.

The site at Coyote Point was an early design of famed architect Gardner Dailey, and was highlighted in a MOMA exhibit in 1944 as an example of excellence in WWII military design. The Alameda site has similar architectural elements, and research is currently underway to determine who the architect was. Recently discovered architectural drawings confirmed that Joseph Esherick designed an addition to the US Maritime Training School in 1946. He was the famed architect of the Sea Ranch development that inspired generations of future architects.

Also, the recent Page and Turnbull report has significant flaws. Please don't base your decision on this. They only address APC's parcel and did not evaluate the entire listing site 620 Central Ave. which includes two additional buildings on EBParks land. Viewed as a whole, the site is relatable and retains substantial aspects of historical significance that are worthy of preservation for possible National and California Registers under criteria that includes an association with People and Events in History and Architecture. These people were our community members who sacrificed their lives. These architects went on to influence institutional and residential architecture for decades. These are important aspects of the site that need to be addressed.

Community groups met with the Planning Department recently to ask that they remain neutral and refrain from their aggressive push for demolition, stating also that residents voted for "reuse of buildings" in the 2019 special election. Planning chair Andrew Thomas stated that the decision to move forward with demolition "was purely financial". This is not a good reason to delist a property from the HAB list and ignore the historical events and people that are important to the history of our community.

Supporters for preservation and reuse include over 1000+ community members including the USS Hornet, the national American Merchant Marine Veterans, Alameda Architectural Preservation Society, Alameda Citizens Task Force, numerous Retired Navy Captains and many others.

This community support is what makes the site important—a visual reminder that connects us with people from our past. Please listen to the oral histories of Mariners during their training in WWII and how their experience shaped our victory.

APC has misled the community by stating in their campaign that buildings would be repurposed. Financial reasons are not a good reason to delist and demolish a historic property so a private developer can push their project. There is also a pending court case with APC for not following the proper protocol and going to the HAB Board before moving to Design Review. On their application, director of APC, Doug Biggs, falsely answered "NO" to the question: Property on Alameda Historic Buildings Study List. Their petition to delist and demolish are attempts to circumvent procedures in place to preserve and protect historic properties, including the CEQA environmental requirement.

I respectfully ask that you use your authority to preserve these historically significant buildings in our community. We have seen developers come and go throughout the years, destroying historic buildings along the way. Please don't let that happen here.

I was unable to finish my public comment this evening and I just wanted to send you the last paragraph of what I had intended to say. Here it is:

On his federal application to obtain the property, Mr. Biggs responded "The property is suitable for the proposed use." If Mr. Biggs now feels the buildings no longer meet his needs, there are other alternatives. The City of Alameda has solicited bids for an available parcel at Alameda Point. A new state law requires the City to first allow affordable-housing developers an opportunity to submit bids. Other parcels could also be considered for his county facility. This would eliminate the need to demolish rare, historically-significant buildings that remain among the last-standing vestiges in the entire nation of the Maritime Service's heroic efforts and sacrifices in WW2 and the Korean War.
