Mayor Spencer and council members,

I write to express my concern regarding the nomination of Carol Gottstein for the Commission on Disabilities and to express my hope that reasonable heads will prevail tonight in rejecting her appointment to an important body in this city.

As the attached documents clearly show, Ms. Gottstein was caught trespassing in City Hall West last spring on more than one occasion and accessing employee offices, email and files in the Public Works Department. This is the same department that staff's the Commission on Disabilities.

I'd like to believe that these facts were unknown at the time of the Mayor's nomination, but they have clearly been discussed over the past two weeks since the nomination was announced and the nomination continues. The utter disrespect of City Staff who's work lives were violated is beyond belief, and I am hoping that reasonable heads will prevail tonight and vote "no" on appointing such a person to a leadership in our city.

These aren't past crimes from decades ago, this is recent history, impacting staff who continue to serve this city. I urge the Mayor to rescind this appointment request before it is heard and if this action is not taken, for the council to reject what is a completely inappropriate nomination for service.

Thank you all for your consideration and your service,

Cheers,

John Knox White

Narrative

(WIT) [REDACTED] reported between the listed dates and time span, (SUS) Gottstein was seen inside a locked city office after business hours accessing a city computer without permission.

This incident was originally reported on 02/16/15 at approx. 1411 hours and cleared with IC #104 by (WIT) Ofc. Koutsoubos. Further investigation was needed so I responded to 950 Mall Sq. (City Hall West) to speak with [REDACTED]. I met [REDACTED] in her office. [REDACTED] office is located at City Hall West, off of the east corridor in the Public Works Wing of the building. The Public Works wing and offices can be accessed from a locked rear entrance door on the south side, or from locked doors located off of the north side main lobby.

Payne said on 02/16/15 at approx. 1400 hours she went to her office (room [REDACTED]). All city offices were closed that day as it was President's Day. She entered the building as she typically does via the southeast rear entrance door. Prior to entering through that door, she saw Gottstein's vehicle parked in the rear parking lot courtyard which is adjacent to her office and west of the southeast rear entrance door. She knows Gottstein's vehicle as she has previously seen her drive it and park it in the same disabled parking spot in the courtyard.

[REDACTED] entered the rear door with her building key which opens both the rear door and her office door (key #N9B12X). Her office is in room [REDACTED] which is located on the west side of the east corridor, south of the conference room which is located on the east side of the corridor. She believed she was the last person in her office when she left it locked on 02/13/15 at approx. 1500 hrs. She put her key into her office door lock to unlock it.

When she opened her office door she saw Gottstein sitting at (OTH) [REDACTED] desk. [REDACTED] desk is one of three desks in the office and is located directly across from the entrance door, south of her desk. (OTH) [REDACTED] also works in the office and has a desk along the south side of the office.

[REDACTED] questioned Gottstein and asked her how she got inside her office. Gottstein told her the door was open. Gottstein told her Mastick Senior Center was closed so she came to use a computer and check her e-mail. [REDACTED] asked Gottstein why she thought it was ok to enter her office and Gottstein just said, "I'm sorry [REDACTED]" She called the police while Gottstein was still inside her office. Dispatch was asking her questions and Gottstein wanted to talk to dispatch so she handed Gottstein the phone. She believed Gottstein explained to dispatch why she was there and she took back the phone. She informed Gottstein the police were on their way. Gottstein told her she had to get her things from the conference room. She last saw Gottstein walking towards the conference room and assumed she was going to wait there for the police. When Ofc. Koutsoubos arrived they checked the conference room and Gottstein had left.

Narrative

[REDACTED] knows Gottstein as a long time community member and as opposition to some of [REDACTED] city projects, most recently the Shoreline Bikeway Project. She believes Gottstein has blogged on the local blog "Bayport Blogging Alameda" under the user name "Vigi." [REDACTED] believes "Vigi" is short for the word "Vigilante" related to other posts associated with the user name "Vigi." [REDACTED] believes "Vigi" and Gottstein are the same person, based on comments made on the blog that were similar to comments made by Gottstein at community meetings. One comment posted by "Vigi" on 02/15/15 at approx. 1637 hrs read, "[REDACTED] bless her heart, actually keeps all those Comment Cards for future analysis." This comment was posted on the blog the day prior to 2/16/15. [REDACTED] keeps the comment cards "Vigi" was referring to on her desk. [REDACTED] thought it peculiar that "Vigi" would know she kept her comment cards unless "Vigi" had seen them on her desk. These posted comments by "Vigi" (believed to be Gottstein) lead [REDACTED] to believe Gottstein may have been in her office previous to 2/16/15.

As Gottstein was known to [REDACTED] I asked [REDACTED] if she could identify Gottstein's DMV photo which was printed from CalPhoto. [REDACTED] positively identified the photo, dated and initialed it. I later booked that photo and an information sheet with Gottstein's DMV printout into evidence.

[REDACTED] advised janitorial staff may have cleaned her office after she left on 02/13/15. (OTH) [REDACTED] is an [REDACTED] for Public Works and is in charge of keys for building access and scheduling the janitorial service. I spoke with [REDACTED] at her office. [REDACTED] said Universal Building Services (UBS) does clean their offices on Fridays, typically between 1800-1830 hours. She said they have been very good about locking doors after they leave an office. They have a master key that allows access to City Hall West and all of the offices they clean. [REDACTED] never provided Gottstein a key to City Hall West.

[REDACTED] said after Gottstein left she checked other offices along her corridor and did find room [REDACTED] unlocked. She said it was not uncommon to find doors to individual offices unlocked or open but everyone in her office (room [REDACTED]) makes it a point to lock the door prior to leaving. There is an alternate access to her office via an adjoining empty office south of her office. That office also has a door that is accessed off of the east corridor. She checked that door as well after Gottstein left and found it was locked.

[REDACTED] gave me the number for UBS. I spoke with UBS management who confirmed they had cleaning crews there on 2/13/15 to clean the building. UBS Management checked with the cleaning team and the cleaning team had no specific recollection if room [REDACTED] was left locked. It is their regular practice to close and lock all office doors after they clean them.

According to [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] office doors are routinely left unlocked or open. That said, they specifically all make it a point to lock room [REDACTED]. Even if office doors are left open, a key would be needed to enter the cooridor. The north doors off the main lobby also have signs posted that read, "Employees Only." Nobody working in office [REDACTED] gave Gottstein permission to enter or use their computers. Gottstein admitted to [REDACTED] she was using [REDACTED] computer to access her e-mail. [REDACTED] would like to press charges against Gottstein (see [REDACTED] written statement for details).

(WIT) Detective Vreeland responded to office [REDACTED], seized [REDACTED] computer for forensic analysis and took a statement from [REDACTED] (see his supplemental and [REDACTED] statement for details).

[REDACTED] believed Gottstein may attend regular meetings related to the base redevelopment committee that sometimes meets in conference #140 of City Hall West. I called (OTH) [REDACTED] from city community development in an attempt to verify if Gottstein was ever issued a key or if she is listed as a committee member. He is checking on those details and will get back to me as soon as he gets that information.

At my request, (WIT) Dispatcher Moon made a CD-R recording of the phone call [REDACTED] made to dispatch (IC#104 from 2/16/15). I listened to the phone call. [REDACTED] report to dispatch is consistent with her statement. At one point during the conversation [REDACTED] handed the phone to someone with a woman's voice who said something to the effect of, "It was a mistake." After that she gave the phone back to [REDACTED] per the dispatcher's request. I later booked that CD-R into evidence.

There was no sign of forced entry on any doors or windows and all locks are still operational. The building is not alarmed and there is no video surveillance.

This case is pending further follow up and analysis of [REDACTED] computer to see if additional charges apply, related to the access of that computer. Gottstein will be contacted after the computer analysis.

Narrative

When [REDACTED] returned to work on 2/17/15, [REDACTED] told him SUS-Gottstein was found using his computer the day before. He learned Gottstein was able to enter the City Hall West building, access the locked Public Works portion of the building, then get into his locked office and access his password protected computer. [REDACTED] said he was not sure how Gottstein got past the required password screen on his computer but admitted he does have his password written down on a piece of paper inside a folder that is mixed in with several folders on his desk.

[REDACTED] said on 2/17/15, before I arrived to speak with him, he checked his computer and was not able to detect if anything had been deleted or altered. [REDACTED] said he accessed the "Mozilla Firefox" web browser history and noticed several records dated 2/16/15 which was Monday, Presidents' Day Holiday. See [REDACTED] written statement for further.

When I arrived at City Hall - West on 2/17/15, I asked [REDACTED] to not use his computer any more. I took 22 digital photographs of the hallway leading to the office, of the office, and several photographs of [REDACTED] desk. I removed the power source from [REDACTED] computer. I removed the other USB connections, the monitor connection, and the CAT5 Ethernet connection from the computer. I removed the computer tower from the desk area at 1335 hours and brought it to the APD Computer Forensic Lab for further analysis.

On 2/18/15 at approximately 0615 hours, I removed the Seagate 250 GB (S/N 9VY5L6H) hard drive from the computer tower. I connected the hard drive to a validated Tableau hardware write blocker via SATA connection. I then used Guidance Software Encase V 7.10.03 to create a forensically sound copy of the Seagate hard drive. The acquisition completed at approximately 0830 hours, I used the same Encase software to process the acquired forensic image. The processing started at 0836 hours.

While the imaged hard drive was being processed, I connected the computer tower, minus the hard drive, to a monitor, mouse, and keyboard. I accessed the BIOS date and time. I was able to confirm the BIOS date and time was accurate and matched the actual date and time, (cloud based), on my department issued Verizon cell phone.

At 2/18/15, the processing of the imaged hard drive completed. No errors were detected or reported. The MD5 and SHA1 hash values verified confirming the exact bit for bit acquisition of the hard drive.

I began the examination of the imaged and processed Seagate hard drive. I was able to confirm that at the time I removed the computer from [REDACTED] office, the computer time zone setting were set to "(UTC-08:00) Pacific Time (US & Canada)." I could see that [REDACTED] personal email was accessed during the time the Gottstein used [REDACTED] computer. I believe the documents were only accessed and possibly read. I did not locate any evidence that the documents were printed or forwarded. Gottstein did print her personal medical records and a document she accessed through the internet. No official City documents were printed from [REDACTED] computer on 2/16/15. Gottstein logged into four additional emails while she was using [REDACTED] computer.

- 2.
- 3.
- 4.

I had the City IT department check the phone records for all of the City phones in the Engineering department. I received a four page list of the phone calls before and after 2/16/15. There were no outgoing calls from any of the Engineering phones on 2/16/15. I will have records scan the four page document into this report.

On 2/24/15, I learned that SUS-Gottstein had been found inside the City Hall West building at 950 W. Mall Square again on 2/21/15. Ofc. Burns contacted her inside an upstairs office library. Ofc. Burns was instructed by the City Manager's Office to escort Gottstein off of the property and to issue her a formal trespass warning. The incident was documented on APD # 15-998.

Based on the fact that The City Manager's Office did not wish to have Gottstein arrested on 2/21/15, I called [REDACTED] and asked him if he still wanted Gottstein prosecuted for accessing his user names and passwords to gain access to his computer and his personal email. [REDACTED] requested Gottstein still be charged with Identity Theft - 530.5 PC.

On 2/25/15 at around 1225 hours, I met with [REDACTED] and returned his computer tower.

Narrative

On 2/26/15 at 0826 hours, Ofc. Suth contacted Gottstein and obtained a written statement. Gottstein denied going through [REDACTED] emails and stated his computer was on and logged in so she was not required to provide a user name and password. Gottstein admitted she should not have been in the office but, she said she only accessed her email and looked on the internet.

On 2/26/15, [REDACTED] sent an email with screen shots of the internet history from his computer. He also sent copies of the same screen shots with his added notes. I will have records attach them to the report.

I am forwarding this investigation to the District Attorney's Office for review and possible charge of 530.5 PC.

Narrative

On 2/26/25 at approx. 0826 hrs. I contacted (SUS) Gottstein at her home. I asked Gottstein if she would like to provide a written statement. She agreed to provide a statement. I took the statement from Gottstein on her front porch. (WIT) Ofc. Young was on scene for a portion of the contact but I advised him he could leave after I spoke with Gottstein and began to take her statement. I recorded the contact with my DAR which I later uploaded to the DAR server. Gottstein's statement is summarized as follows:

Gottstein said she is a member of the Restoration Advisory Board that regularly meets at City Hall West. She does not have a key to the building but has temporarily borrowed one from people she knows who have had keys to enter for different meetings through the years. On 2/16/15 she went to City Hall West and entered through the southeast door that leads to the Public Works wing. The door was ajar so she let herself in. She went to City Hall West to use a computer because Mastick Senior Center and the Free Library were closed. She saw an open office and sat at the middle desk. She bumped into the computer and the screen saver lit up showing the computer was left on. She sat down at the computer to check her e-mail and print up some time sensitive documents. The computer screen was open to an e-mail account. She did not access the e-mail or the computer through a password as no password was needed. She logged out of that e-mail account so she could log into her own G-Mail account. She checked her e-mail and printed out her documents. While in the office she was interrupted by (WIT) [REDACTED]. She has never been given permission to use city computers and she knows she should not be there after hours. She meant no harm and is sorry she was there. She will never use a city computer again without permission (see Gottstein's written statement for details).

I also asked Gottstein about the blogging site and the reference to the comment card postings [REDACTED] keeps in her office. Gottstein did not admit to being "Vigi" (who authored the post) but said she has heard [REDACTED] talk about keeping the comment cards in different community meetings. She did not see them on her desk and had never been in that office prior to 2/16/15. She was not aware of who's office she was in at the time and didn't know who's computer she was using.

(WIT) Detective Vreeland imaged (VIC) [REDACTED] hard drive and found Gottstein had logged on to several personal e-mail accounts. Based on Internet history, and print logs it appears Gottstein may have accessed [REDACTED] e-mail and possibly personal tax documents. ■■■ said he did not leave his computer on and believes a pass code would have been needed to access this information. Based on these findings and ■■■ statement, he would like to press charges for identity theft as an additional victim on this report (see Detective Vreeland's supplemental for details).

When I took ■■■ original statement she wanted to press charges against Gottstein for entering her office without permission which she believed was left locked.

This case is being submitted to the DDA for charging for the crimes of 602(l) PC - Trespassing and 530.5 PC - Identity Theft.

Of course the "public statement" is the easy part right, that should be a piece of cake for our Mayor to get behind I hope. I mean, who doesn't think that bicycle and pedestrian safety is important, right? The trick is getting some of the local actions and honestly, it's a little troublesome that at the last City Council meeting Trish Spencer, after a commenter spoke about how terrible the Shoreline Cycle Track is (still under construction) that she wanted staff to get back to her with a report about the approval process for the Cycle Track. This is of concern for two reasons (1) dude, was she not paying attention to any of these issues before hand and how did she not get a briefing from staff about this prior to this particular meetings and (2) is questioning all decisions that was made prior to Trish Spencer taking office going to be de rigueur?

Anyway, back to the challenge activities:

- Take a Complete Streets approach
- Identify and address barriers to make streets safe and convenient for all road users, including people of all ages and abilities and those using assistive mobility devices
- Gather and track biking and walking data
- Use designs that are appropriate to the context of the street and its uses
- Take advantage of opportunities to create and complete ped-bike networks through maintenance
- Improve walking and biking safety laws and regulations
- Educate and enforce proper road use behavior by all

So again, making a statement to endorse pedestrian and bike safety is easy and warm fuzzy territory, but putting it into action will actually require taking leadership on these issues and asking staff to be proactive as opposed to looking back at decisions that were already made that accomplishes the goal of bike and pedestrian safety.

1. Before we lower the official speed limit let's first try aggressively enforcing the current 25 mph. That alone would measurably reduce the average speed of cars on streets

Comment by dave — February 12, 2015 @ 6:10 am

2. Not really advocating lowering our speed limit, just a reminder that other cities are lowering theirs and that our nearly uniform 25 mph speed limit is one of the tools that other cities are using to promote pedestrian and bike safety. But I agree that stepped up enforcement would go a long way to helping.

Rising to the challenge

Filed under: Alameda, City Council, Transportation — Lauren Do @ 6:02 am

Last year New York City lowered the speed limit in the city to 25 mph. Recently Mayor Bill DeBlasio credited that effort, along with the larger "Vision Zero" campaign, for the lowest number of pedestrian fatalities since 1910 which is huge considering it was 1910 and the vehicles produced back then probably topped out at like 25 mph anyway.

San Francisco is now considering one upping (or one lowering) New York City and lowering the speed limit to 20 mph in some areas. From The SF Examiner:

The report stated that in 2011, there were 3,111 collisions in The City that resulted in injury. Of those, 844 were between vehicles and pedestrians and 630 were between vehicles and bicyclists, or 27 and 21 percent of total collisions with injuries, respectively.

Of the 28 fatal collisions that occurred in 2011, 17 were between vehicles and pedestrians and four were between vehicles and bicyclists.

A study of 20-mph zones in the London metropolitan area saw a 40 percent decrease in collisions, the budget analyst report said. The report found that "the combination of reducing speed limits in the City through advocating for a change in State law, enhancing speed limit enforcement and installation of traffic calming measures would be most effective at reducing vehicle speed and collisions."

This is a perfect segue into an article about the head of the Department of Transportation urging Mayors across the nation to join the Mayor's Challenge for Safer People and Safer Streets. Here's the call to action:

- Issue a public statement about the importance of bicycle and pedestrian safety
- Form a local action team to advance safety and accessibility goals
- Take local action through the Challenge activities

9. I don't know about adjusting the speed limits they're probably o.k., I think its more about adjusting the attitudes and attention of the drivers, riders and pedestrians.

10. #6—and everyone else (other than Jon Spangler who consistently rides) saying Alameda is great for bicycling—When is the last time you rode around Alameda on a bike?

Comment by A Neighbor — February 12, 2015 @ 9:48 am

1. "... about the approval process for the Cycle Track. This is of concern for two reasons (1) dude, was she not paying attention to any of these issues before hand..."

Now that Trish is Mayor, she is getting a lot of authentic negative feedback from Alamedans who have to drive here, about the cycle track. The Mayor isn't going to get such feedback before she is elected, so your observation is unbelievably stupid. The staff report is not going to be representative of Alameda's reaction to the new Shoreline configuration, but only of those rigged Delphi "community meetings". You may deride me for going to community meetings, but at least I went. And I saw for myself that they were packed with people from the East Bay Bicycle Coalition from out of town. The most vocal guy at our table told me he lived in Oakland. There was no place on the comment form to indicate where the commenter lived. I pointed this out to Gail Payne and Alex Nguyen at the meeting at Lum School, and they just shrugged. It advanced their agenda-what do they care?

But the next time City staff begins a paragraph with "the community felt (or said)...", you might want to ask staff exactly which community they are talking about.

2. Keep the Feds out. We can deal with our transportation safety problems our own way.

Now something important:

Dozens of seabirds have been found on the San Francisco Bay's eastern shores covered in a viscous, mystery substance that destroys feather waterproofing, which can cause hypothermia and death. 20 birds have already died.

East Bay Regional Park District staffers notified International Bird Rescue's San Francisco Bay center about the problem late Friday. A total of 60 seabirds, including Surf Scoters, Buffleheads and Common Goldeneyes had been transported to International Bird Rescue in Fairfield.

The birds have been found in Crab Cove in Alameda,

Comment by jack — February 12, 2015 @ 9:53 am

3. #12 This happened January 17. The substance has never been identified many birds died as a result and many have been rehabilitated and subsequently released. There is a release scheduled for today.

4. 3. According to the APD officers I have spoken with on the topic of traffic enforcement, APD would need another 6-12 sworn officers to significantly improve traffic enforcement (speeding, cell phone use, DUI, etc.) They have 88 now.

I believe the department had almost 120 sworn officers in 1997 when we moved here: I saw them out on the streets all the time. Having more sworn officers on the streets would help them implement community policing objectives like having officers patrolling the business districts on foot or by bike, visiting more schools, improving pedestrian and bike education and safety, etc.

Are we willing to pay the tab for what we keep asking for?

Comment by Jon Spangler — February 12, 2015 @ 6:51 am

5. The thing is, there are places where there are few or no pedestrians (for example, Willie Stargell, the stretch of Otis Drive between the shopping center and Lum, and the main arteries of Bay Farm Island) where 25 mph is too slow and serve merely as sitting-duck speed traps. There are some places (Webster, Park St., school zones, Shoreline Drive on weekends) where it is too fast. I would like to see an intelligent adjustment instead of a blanket speed limit change.

2/22/15 Comment by Jack Mingo — February 12, 2015 @ 6:57 am

6. Jon, given the budget concerns it's probably more cost effective to increase bike paths which I feel will encourage more biking in Alameda. Because of our flat topography, making it easier for people of all ages to bike — more bike paths should be part of the traffic calming solution.

2/22/15 Comment by Karen Bey — February 12, 2015 @ 7:14 am

7. Lots of pedestrians on Willie Stargell, particularly during school drop offs and pick ups when families walk across Stargell from Coast Guard housing and Shinsei Gardens. Upping the speed limit on Stargell would make it even harder for those families to cross safely.

Comment by Lauren Do — February 12, 2015 @ 7:44 am

8. #5 Jack Willie on Stargell they do drive too fast already...most drive over 25/mph. One reason they were able to increase the speed limit on Appenzato was to build the sound wall at Bayport. You need to remember there is a school in the middle of Bayport and there are a lot of children coming from the Base, Coast Guard Housing, the low income housing and soon from Alameda Landing. It will eventually be a 4 lane road but I imagine the speed limit will stay the same. I also imagine that the Coast Guard will be taking down that fence at some point. I have noticed since Safeway has opened 5th street is getting a lot more traffic.

10. #29 Great video! Felt good just watching and listening...but riding's even better—young or old!

#6 For those who pontificate about what would benefit all of us, why not get on a bike, put on that helmet and ride around—Shoreline, Westline, Grand, Santa Clara, Central, Broadway, the Bay Farm bike bridge, Mecartney, and then back to the navy base out to the Hornet and over to the ferry terminal on Main Street.

Come back and report on how safe you felt on different streets and at various intersections. How did you deal with the cars?

Heck, for kicks, why not put your bike on the ferry to SF, ride down the Embarcadero to the Wharf, and back to the ferry and back to your home...

Report in at any point on your trip....with a traffic report.

11. # 30 — You know what I support — the question is what do you support if anything?

Comment by Karen Bey — February 12, 2015 @ 7:40 pm

12. Here is the problem. There are no bike riders who stop at stop signs (OK- maybe Spangler). We have certain streets which are racetracks in the morning. 25 moh across Alameda is a good idea. 88 cops? That is way too many. We don't need more. Compare that number to Oakland. Get them out of the office and on the streets.

Comment by Breathless — February 13, 2015 @ 7:15 am

13. 25 = I don't object to anyone attending a public meeting. I do object to no "City of Residence" indicator on the comment card, and then later when there are outcries of foul from the legitimate community, the City staff saying, "But the community opinion was so favorable at all those meetings we held." Taken to its logical absurd conclusion, what if these meetings were so badly publicized, that NO Alamedans came, just people from out of town who were invited by the organizations they belong to? Would the results of that meeting be an accurate barometer of "community opinion"? I think not. And given the small sample size at any one meeting, I think it could happen.

Comment by vigi — February 13, 2015 @ 9:59 am

14. A modest proposal –

Alameda residents that have more "remaining-expected-life-as-a-resident" should have a bigger say in decision-making, since they will have to live with the results of the decisions for longer.

I propose the following for "Stakeholder" Status:

15. #33- I realize that this is anecdotal, but I went to as many of the Shoreline Bike Path meetings as I could [there were a lot of them]. Everytime we broke into small groups, everyone in my group was from Alameda.

General comment: Gail Payne made a LOT of compromises between the "bike group" and the "car group". It seems there are some very vocal folks from the car group complaining now. I feel like she wasted her time trying to appease them.

Comment by Cat E — February 13, 2015 @ 11:17 am

19. Lauren,

I'm open to ideas for stakeholder percentage bonuses. Maybe some of the following would work:

Have kids enrolled in school = +10%
Just had house painted / apartment recarpeted / shed dehumidified / etc = +15% (must provide receipts)

Comment by Brock — February 13, 2015 @ 1:23 pm

10. Frank M,

A lot of those 18-25 were likely born and raised in Alameda. I can't imagine anyone like that moving and throwing away that "Native Alamedan" status that carries so much cachet and authority. If they moved away, they would just be considered a "TRANSPLANT" in their new town! Humiliating!

Not to mention all their descendents would have to start counting all over again when bragging about "My family has been here for XX generations!"

Comment by Brock — February 13, 2015 @ 1:27 pm

11. Joward,

How about 1 vote for each $1000 of property tax per year being CURRENTLY paid, taking full account of Prop 13 valuations?

The tax paid in the past is spent and gone and all those decisions have already been made.

Comment by Brock — February 13, 2015 @ 1:32 pm

12. Now, you are all forgetting that in the minds of some, and vigi may be one of these, those "not born in Alameda", "not homeowners", and/or "not connected with an organization(s) who show up routinely at civic meetings to oppose things" are pretty much totally discounted. vigi's form needs to have all of these checked to insure that we have a true picture of the true Alamedan before we let them opine on anything on the island, because, well, you know, we are an island.

Comment by Kate Quick — February 13, 2015 @ 2:17 pm

13. The recent housing bubble is a bit of a game changer. My neighbors (semi-retired) had seemed perfectly content to live out their years on our very quiet walkable street in Alameda, but when the house across the street sold for over $900,000, the penny dropped. Final numbers are not in, but based on real estate blogs, their house just sold for close to or over a million. According to Zillow, they paid under $150,000 in the 1990s—I can only think they must have assumed the former owner's loan because that price was unheard of at the time for a house that size, and the house was only two years old. "The lure of easy money has a very strong appeal." Same goes for the kids who inherit. They may keep the house and live in it, or rent it out if they choose to live elsewhere, especially since they get to inherit the old property tax rate along with the house, but that kind of money will buy you a palace in other parts of the

16. Hmm..well, this discussion did not go in the direction I would have predicted. Gail Payne, bless her heart, actually keeps all those Comment Cards for future analysis. I just meant that if the residence of the commenter on any particular project on any particular date was taken into account, the results would be more meaningful. If most of the people who like a project only visit it from out of town, yet the people who don't like live with it daily, that should tell you something.

I don't agree with Brock's argument. When I was 18-25 having grown up here, I couldn't wait to leave! And that was true of my peers at the time. Alameda is not dangerous or exciting [most of the time], which is why kids find it boring. They move around more. As we age, boring translates to comfortable, safe, and predictable. We stay put and Alameda suddenly has a lot more to offer. Frank M gets it.

Hi guys,

I've attached the browser history (16 files). I first print screened from Firefox and have provided separate files with my comments. Firefox unfortunately did not have much detail on the date the links were accessed.

Then, while I was converting Chrome to my primary browser (importing bookmarks and what not), discovered that I could import the history from Firefox, as well. So, the "history..." pdfs are from Chrome. In Chrome, the history showed the date and time of access.

One weird thing that happened was in the "print screen 06.png" file, it shows REDACTED being accessed in January. After I imported the various browser info from Firefox into Chrome, I couldn't find that usage in Chrome, and when I went back into Firefox it was gone.

The printed file "City of Alameda - File #: 2015..." found in the Sharp spool might be shown in the file "print screen 03.png". It might be from the third link from the top. I think this is a blog site.

Let me know if you have any questions or need additional info.

Thanks all,
REDACTED

The Location column contains URLs, many of which are also redacted. A handwritten note 'Carol's continued browsing' is written next to the first few results. Another note 'Carol viewing my tax related documents and the email that it originated from' is written next to the results for 'Sarah Palin Borrowed from Bristol's Closet, Whoopi Goldberg Wore...'. Whether people who want to attend our meetings and participate in planning our projects live here or not is irrelevant since:

- a) they ride their bikes, walk, and drive in Alameda when they come here, too—we cannot pull up the drawbridges on others, and should not lest our stores and restaurants shrivel up, and
- b) non-residents' federal, state, and local tax dollars are helping build all kinds of local infrastructure projects through Measure B and other fund sources administered by the Alameda County Transportation Commission.

- 16. Jon, one of the emerging trends and practices to increase pedestrian and bicycle safety is green bike lanes and bicycle zone striping. There are others, but I've focused on the ones related to bikes because they are in my opinion one of the most cost effective.

- 17. Jon: do you know if they are painting the new lanes on Shoreline green? It seems like a good idea, given the confusion some of the more addle-brained drivers are expressing.

bike group) combined with use-it-or-lose-it money. The problem with that kind of money is if you don't use it right away, you lose your place in the needy line and drop to the bottom. So a city builds something to keep the place.

We have a city transportation plan and several more specific traffic studies. Rather than start from scratch, the people we have, such as the city staff, JKW, Allison, Heather, David B, Lena, Tony, etc. – I'm guessing at names I've seen in blogs- might form the basis for review and consolidation of what we have that would apply to a full blown comprehensive transit plan, then start the process needed to bring one out. Wouldn't it be nice to build to plan, not just add another puddle of concrete grief to a road?

Comment by Li_ — February 12, 2015 @ 10:58 am

14. RE: #6: Karen, bike paths do ZIP for pedestrian safety and Alameda drivers are notorious for not yielding the right of way to pedestrians in a crosswalk—which does not have to be painted to be legal, BTW:

<http://www.leginfo.ca.gov/cgi-bin/displaycode?section=veh&group=21001-22000&file=21949-21971>

Nor would bike paths reduce speeding by motorists. Traffic laws only work when they are known, endorsed by the community, and enforced. This applies to cyclists who fail to stop at stop signs or signals or ride at night without legally required lights. Alameda needs better traffic enforcement so our streets are safer for drivers, pedestrians, and bicyclists.

Comment by Jon Spangler — February 12, 2015 @ 12:00 pm

15. 11: Carol, there was *nothing* "rigged" about the Shore Line Drive enhancement meetings. (You ought to know—I saw you at at least one of them.) About 100 people attended each one, and the comments and criticisms offered at those meetings—including yours—significantly improved the scope and quality of the final design. The Shore Line Drive planning process was more open and engaged more different kinds of people than most Public Works projects of its type since I have been here (1997-present).

And why do you object to "people from Oakland" being involved in planning roadways that they help pay for here in Alameda? We Alamedans comment on projects outside of our tiny island, which is not as isolated as you might want to pretend is true. Lots of people from off the island help keep our favorite local stores and restaurants in business, from Pagano's to Tucker's to Ole's, too—and it is perfectly legitimate for "outsiders" to discuss *public* transportation projects here, just as it is appropriate for us to go to Oakland and San Francisco to comment on projects they are building that affect us. (No island is an island, as John Donne once almost said.)

There are many Bike East Bay (formerly East Bay Bicycle Coalition) members here on the island, BTW. And we ask for help in planning projects from our friends just like you do.

The bike track may be mostly recreational use as opposed to people getting to and from destinations, but so what? It will enhance safety for pedestrians and dog walkers. Traffic volumes were studied. The only serious concern I have seen expressed is for when Fed Ex and other delivery vehicles may block the single lane. No idea what provisions may have been made for that one. Seems like a serious wrinkle in the plan unless there are mitigations I don't know about. I've seen them pulled over in construction lane of what will be the track.

None of this changes the real point which is that Trish seems to want to revisit EVERY process which occurred before she was elected if the outcome is objectionable to her or her cohorts.

Comment by MI — February 12, 2015 @ 10:38 am

1. #19 I agree completely. The worst offenders are the UPS trucks on Park St. who for some reason seem to double-park just short of the x-walks. making visibility impossible for both autos and pedestrians. At San Jose and Park Ave the City has added new signs on that alert cars on Park Ave that the traffic on San Jose is NOT required to Stop. Saw this for the first time last week.

Comment by frank m — February 12, 2015 @ 10:40 am

2. I agree with AJ. This is a problem in the East End, especially along Broadway. There will be push-back though because the problem is mostly in areas where there is little off street parking. One or two houses on my street have no off street parking at all.

Comment by Denise Shelton — February 12, 2015 @ 10:49 am

3. Alamedans are not open to change, especially personal change. If we were willing to accept that for the greater good some streets would be arterial, and if it caused some of the affected grief so be it, then we would not have the silly system we have, which is a reaction to NIMBY and panacea. Making wide streets narrower, to slow traffic, having 2 block 35mph zones, putting in what amounts to mile long curbs because bikes and cars can't stay in the lines(?), ped crossings that stay lit when no-one is there, plops of concrete along schools that I haven't figured out yet, except to see a driver hit a plop in the fog loose control and get stranded on it for awhile. None of this is good traffic sense.

Public Works is heading toward Lincoln and Park where they will do more damage with concrete to an already difficult intersection. If they just painted the lines they have, put in reflectors, arrows to show which lanes go where and drop the 35mph which starts there and stops at Fernside, and a signaled left turn it would be fine. The biggest problem I have there is that at night and when foggy, people don't know where the lanes are. People in the left lane cross over the right lane to go down Lincoln.

The city has put in probably five configurations at High and Fernside in the last five years, none of which are as good as what was there to begin with. A lot of this traffic mitigation stuff seems to be the result of single subject thinking (in this case, I'm assuming, it's the very active

9. One of the easiest things that could be done to greatly increase safety and visibility at intersections is daylighting. It is really really hard to see people entering crosswalks when cars & trucks are parked at the intersection right up to (and often into) the crosswalk.

10. 11. Trish is seen as the savior of island life by many of her supporters who I would describe as protectionists, so it makes sense that there has been a surge of communications to her office where as in the past people might just grumble to each other or spout off in LTE. Regardless of the process having been heavily infiltrated by foreigners, which can't be verified because of the pre-emptive move by staff not to have addresses on sign in sheets at the work shop as a strategic move to prevent said verification, bicycling in Alameda has grown exponentially in the twenty plus years I've lived here. Living on Oak which is the official bike route to south shore I see the bike traffic every day. For years I saw this solitary middle aged woman commuting to and from her job, but now there are swarms of people with baskets who are obviously shopping. We also host one of the preminent bike advocacy groups in the bay area. Home grown and award winning.
