Eric Kos

Eric J. Kos is the co-founder and co-publisher of official newspaper of the City of Alameda, the Alameda Sun. Eric has helped publish three local history books including Alameda an Architectural Treasure Chest with his business partner, Dennis Evanosky.

Eric and Dennis teamed up in 2004 to write East Bay Then & Now. Since then they've been contracted to write five other California history books, the latest, Lost Los Angeles, was released at the end of 2014. Their first international history title, Lost Ballparks, was published in 2016 and is a finalist for the Casey Award for "Best Baseball Book of the Year" for 2017.

They have presented some two dozen presentations on Bay Area history and also host the Web site www.oaklandhistory.com. Through the Alameda Recreation and Parks Department's Alameda Walks program, both Eric and Dennis lead free history tours in Alameda.

Eric graduated from the Rhode Island School of Design in 1997 and contributed to several local newspapers in the East Bay before starting his own, the Alameda Sun, in 2001.

Lily Mitchem Pearsall

Lily Mitchem Pearsall is curatorial project manager at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art (SFMOMA). She graduated from Scripps College with a double major in Art History and Politics, and holds an MA from the Courtauld Institute of Art, London. Prior to joining SFMOMA, she was director of communications and programming for the Art Dealers Association of America and conducted PhD coursework at the City University of New York. Her research interests focus on public engagements with modern and contemporary art, with a concentration on theories and ideas of space and aesthetic experiences. At SFMOMA her projects include work on the Campaign for Art exhibitions, publications, and programs, the exhibition Matisse/Diebenkorn, and the upcoming presentation René Magritte: The Fifth Season, which will open in May of 2018.
