Hi Amanda

I vote for the mural that hides the gutter that is otherwise an eye sore. Would be great if the bottom of the mural be extended to 15-16' as there are lots of great details on this photo.

Regards and thanks for listening

It may be more generic, but the beautiful egret is a better choice for that space. If the Park Street 1909 "photo" were 2-2½ times as wide on that wall, I might feel otherwise, but as pictured on the website, the bird is my clear preference.

It'll be enjoyed and appreciated by far more people driving by than there are people who might walk by or have the Park Street picture in view long enough to take it in. (I might feel a little differently if the picture was viewed while driving down Park Street pointing the same direction as the camera.)

Feedback

Hi

Amanda just putting my vote in for the Majestic Egrets that gracefully line our shorelines with their toothpick legs wading in the waters of ballena bay & crab cove . They are part of the nature these past months , that forced us to stop in our tracks & be thankful for the beauty of nature that surrounds are beautiful island city.

A scene of old Alameda seems most appropriate for modern Alameda, though the bird is lovely.

I really like the Egret design.

(p.s. I could see the other design doing well somewhere at the Southshore Shopping Center, since there's so much historical info there already -- should that be available someday down the road.)

Thanks Amanda!
